FLOOD RELIEF

College student's volunteers do what emergency agencies have not

By Alison McGonagle

A young Andover man taking time off from college is providing some flood victims with help they were not receiving from their insurance companies and government agencies.

On the second day of flooding, Andover resident Evan Greer helped launch the Waters Rising Collective. While flood victims throughout the Merrimack Valley have complained about the help available from companies and emergency management agencies, the volunteer Waters Rising group has been helping these victims clean their homes. Members have done the dirty work of pumping water and removing insulation that established groups say is not part of their mission.

"What allows us to do what we're doing is lack of bureaucracy," Greer said. "We are a group of people who got together and want to help. There's no hierarchy. The fact that we don't have the bureaucracy allows us to help right away."

While the collective counts 15 organizers, there are six to eight who show up each day at the unofficial headquarters – Greer's family home on Spring Grove Road – and go on assignment to help those who call for assistance. Waters Rising members are diverse, ranging in age from 15 to 40, with many

LIKE FATHER, LIKE DAUGHTER

A FATHER'S GIFT: Art – and life

Don Stidsen gave his daughter Lizzie his kidney earlier this year. Her recovery should make this Sunday a special Father's Day.

By Brian Davidson

As an avid photographer, Lizzie Stidsen takes after her dad. But she never pictured how much brighter her life would be once she received his right kidney in January after both of hers stopped functioning and had to be removed.

"When I look back on how I used to feel, this is a big improvement," the 16-year-old Andover High School junior said. "I don't think I've really felt this good in my entire life."

Lizzie's kidneys didn't so much fail as they overachieved for 16 years. An identical twin to her sister Hannah, Lizzie was born with a condition called bilateral dysplasia of the kidneys. Put simply, doctors told her parents, Kate and Don, her kidneys were too small and she would need a transplant within a year.

But by the time Lizzie and Hannah reached one year, all signs indicated that Lizzie's little kidneys were performing well enough to sustain her. But with her kidneys functioning at less than 25 percent of what is considered normal, doctors believed she would probably need the transplant in two years.

"First they said at 1 year old, then they

Zoning Board:

Cabana is too tall

What happens next is unclear

By Alison McGonagle

The Zoning Board of Appeals ruled on Tuesday that the controversial cabana on Hazelwood Circle is an accessory building that is taller than the 1.5 stories allowed by the town.

What its owners must do to correct the situation remains to be seen.

The board did not discuss how the supposed violation should be addressed.

"There are many different remedies," said Nancy K. Jeton, board member, "but it's not our job to decide on them."

The Gibson family built its 1,300-square-foot cabana after receiving verbal approval for a project from the town's former conservation director in October 2004. They later received a building permit, and construction began in early 2005. But the Gibsons never received permission from the Conservation Commission for the project,

Ex-Francis student: Our views were our own

By Brian Davidson

One of the four former students who worked for Andover High School physics teacher Ron Francis' Somerville Divestment Project says Francis never promoted an anti-Semitic political agenda – a charge made by Francis' political opponents.

Francis, the leader of a controversial organization that protests the policies of the Israeli government, is also the informal adviser of the unofficial after school student group Students for Middle East Justice. While respected by colleagues and students as a physics teacher, Francis has angered some opponents of his politics who believe he has used his role with SMEJ to promote an "anti-Semitic" political agenda with students.

Josh Weiner, a former member of SMEJ who is also Jewish, says "that's absolutely false."

"There was no anti-semitism at all," said Weiner, a 2005 graduate.

Last summer, Weiner and three other Andover High stu-

Hard work planned in Big Easy

By Brian Davidson

Andover Youth Services Director Bill Fahey is planning a community service trip to the Big Easy this summer and is inviting some Andover kids to come along. But it will anything but easy.

"You have to be in high school, you have to have a good attitude and be willing to roll up your sleeves and work hard for the people of New Orleans," he said. "It's unbelievable the amount of work that still needs to be done down there."

Fahey has never actually been to New Orleans, but when 2000 Andover High graduate and former AYS counselor Pat Sullivan returned from a recent trip to the city, he told Fahey that damages sustained during Hurricane Katrina were still very much a problem there.

"A lot of people think New Orleans is pretty much already rebuilt by what they see on TV," Fahey said.

Fahey and Sullivan, along with Paul Cardona, another former Andover resident involved with AYS, decided to give Andover kids the opportunity to help rebuild the battered city.

They organized a community service trip through Common Ground Relief, an organization dedicated to Hurricane relief in the Gulf Coast region. The trip will be from Aug. 1 to 16, and those who go will actually be staying in one of the houses that they are helping to rebuild.

"There will be a number of different tasks that Common Ground will want us to do," said Fahey. "We're going to be the team from Andover willing to do anything."

Fahey said the group will work 14-hour days, but anticipates that it will be a life-changing trip for anyone who chooses to participate.

"It should be quite and experience," he said. "And it could be the beginning of many more experiences like this for the Andover kids."

So far, seven people have signed up and there is room for about four more. The total cost is $495 per person, including airfare. Contact Bill Fahey at AYS if interested.

"We might go there as 12 or 15 strangers," said Fahey. "But we're going to come back good friends."

Without bureaucracy, group helps flood victims

holding jobs or school attendance among daily commitments.

"[The collective's formation] really came out of a call from Evan who called one day and said there were lots of floods and people who needed help," said Alia Ghabra, a member of the collective, originally of San Diego and currently of Jamaica Plain.

"It wasn't like we had an exact plan," Greer said. "We were just responding to whatever came our way. Some days, we weren't doing anything, and then the phone would start ringing off its hook. It was pretty hectic for a while." More recently, the calls they are receiving are from individuals who saw the group's Web site, and are seeking help.

Residents can contact the group at www.watersrising.com.

"It's easy for us to analyze how effective we're being. We are more amorphous than any organization-type effort because we can change and base ourselves on the needs of others," Ghabra said.

Group members emphasized that anyone can do what they are doing. None are trained disaster-relief workers or being paid for their work.

"Our hope is that other communities will do this, and that other people will organize in this community," Greer said. "It can be as simple as lending a sump pump."

The group has been collecting sump pumps from Andover and bringing them to Lawrence and Lowell.

"We see a need and fill it," Greer said. "It seems so basic, and yet FEMA and Red Cross seem incapable."

Noel Boxer, Federal Emergency Management Agency public relations officer, is happy that the volunteers are pitching in, but notes that FEMA has a specific role. FEMA offers financial help including loan and grant assistance for those eligible, said Boxer. He admits that the process can be frustrating for victims, but said that the group is controlled by Congress, and has to put procedures in place to guard against fraud.

"I'm glad to hear they (Waters Rising) are out there helping folks. I am sure that people need it," he said.

No titles

The Waters Rising Collective said it does not have the formality or restraints of an agency such as FEMA.

Don't bother trying to figure out who's in charge of the activist group. There are no positions, no titles, and no one member with more power than another.

Greer, a graduate of the Cambridge School of Weston, and college sophomore currently on leave from Swarthmore College, said he put the word out via Internet and flyers that volunteers were needed for a grassroots activist response to the flood.

"There is a network of people in the sense that there are people across the country who know of each other or know people who know people who are activists," Greer said. "We tend to put the word out in that network. In any community you can find these groups, people grassroots networking, and trying to build communities."

Recent Andover High School graduate Lisa Harney heard about the group online.

"I contacted [Greer] after that, because I was interested in getting involved," said Harney, who plans to attend Marlboro College in Vermont this fall. "I had been less active in the community than I would have liked to be, so this was an opportunity. I've had a lot of ideals, but haven't put them into action. I didn't know how."

Harney said she will definitely continue grassroots activism because the experience has been quite positive, despite work that is hard physically and mentally. "I feel like we are giving the community help it needs that it wasn't getting otherwise."

Community help

From pulling a moldy carpet from someone's home, to sharing meals and shelter at the Greers', the collective's effort has been a group effort. Similarly, the Andover community is supporting their efforts in various ways.

"Wild Oats has been really awesome," said Ghabra. "We made a vegan chili for 200 people at Lazarus House. Wild Oats provided all the ingredients. Pat Scanlon (Andover recycling activist) gave us many plastic recycling bins which we've used to clean out the Lazarus House's basement." In addition, Andover Unitarian Universalist Church and North Parish of North Andover donated money and food to the group's efforts.

Greer said it seemed natural to first lend their efforts to Lawrence. After working with Common Ground Collective in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, he said he became aware of "systemic racism in government relief" or the lack of relief.

The group admits its focus is not in Andover, because the "town is fairly well off, so we have been redistributing [Andover's] resources to surrounding towns," according to Greer. Some other sites the group has visited lie in Dracut and Lowell. They have not helped any residents in Andover, because none have called looking for assistance. Members say they didn't know about the devastation at Washington Park or Balmoral Condominiums, where more than 100 residents remain homeless.

"The injustices that are existent in society are amplified during disaster," Greer said. "We initially put out a bunch of calls to community organizations in Lawrence. Lazarus House called back and said that their basement, where they kept over 15,000 pounds of food, was flooded."

In addition to Lazarus House, the group has helped several individuals clean out their basements, in some cases gutting the basements. Many people they have helped have been single mothers, elderly people, and disabled individuals. What each has in common is that their needs were not fully met by the bureaucratic organizations in place to implement help and support in an emergency.

"Oppression, whether gender, race or class, is amplified in disaster, and needs to be addressed," Greer said.

Boxer said FEMA has safeguards in place to make sure that victims who do not speak English deal with representatives who speak their language. Similarly, there are equal rights officers in place, where anyone can turn if they feel their treatment has been unfair.

"I think that overall people are satisfied," said Boxer. "Every day I visit the recovery center. I run into folks who have already got money in their bank accounts from FEMA. Every day I run into more and more folks who are happy and who have received funds."

While the collective seem to be busy affecting change in the area, members do not plan to continue indefinitely.

"We've been trying to disband for a while," Ghabra said, "and we will once needs are met in the area. It's not that were better than anyone else, but we are the only organization that can help people clean, or do what they have to do. We know no one else will clean out someone's basement."

Once disbanded, Greer will return to playing music for a living, as a traveling folk singer. All members of the collective say they will go back to other forms of activism once this is over.

Either way, the experience is one none will soon forget, as they say they've learned a lot.

"Things change by people getting together and doing things," Greer said, "not marches, or protests, but people working in communities and organizing and solidarity changes things. It's great to see people with things to offer offering.

"That's the society we want to live in."

IN BRIEF

PAST AND PRESENT

The top photo shows North Main Street circa the 1940s. It had an office building called the Aberdeen (at left) at 348-362 North Main St., in Shawsheen Village. It was built in 1922 by William Wood, and converted to apartments around 1931.

Does town owe you?

The town of Andover has more than 60 checks from 2004 and 2005 that remain outstanding on the town's general account. These are checks issued by the town that were never cashed.

The checks are listed in a legal advertisement in today's paper, and range in value from almost $3,370 to $4.02. Residents who believe they are entitled to one of these checks can contact the treasurer's office at 978-623-8246.

Last day for reduced student bus fees

Before the 2003-04 school year, the Andover School Committee approved a student transportation policy that provides transportation to students in grades 7-12 on a fee basis. The fee established for the 2006-07 school year is $300. Families with more than two students in grades 7-12, shall not have to pay more than $600.

Students who pay the fee in full by today, June 15 may deduct $40 for one student and $80 when paying for two or more students, according to the schools. Therefore, the discounted price is $260 per student with a family maximum of $520.

Applications have been mailed home and applications are available on the school department Web site at www.aps1.net. Applications are also available for a free or reduced transportation fee based upon income.

Conserve water

Through a grant from Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, the Andover Department of Public Works has water conservation kits available. Included in the kit are the following: rain gauge, garden hose nozzle, water saving showerhead, kitchen faucet aerator and leak detection dye tablets. Any resident interested in a kit may come to the Robert McQuade Water Treatment Plant located at 397 Lowell St. and ask for Sandy or Kathy. Questions? E-mail dpw-business@andoverma.gov.

Andover Days may see you in September

Saturday's torrid rain forced the cancellation of the second day of Andover Days, which was scheduled to take place in the Park. Numerous vendors and performers were planning to take part. But organizers are hoping for a fall makeup as they are meeting today, Thursday, June 15, to discuss a September event.

"Everyone is busy at this time of year, so maybe September will be better because everyone will be back," organizer Don Robb said.

Robb said 33 non-profit groups were booked to participate in this year's Andover Days event. But only three or four could have participated if Andover Days had been moved to the next day, Sunday, which was a sunny day.

"They were committed elsewhere," Robb said.

So, the event was canceled.

"And it just might be better," he said.

Clean up Foster's

The private Foster's Pond Corp. is asking for volunteers to participate in a clean-up of the 120-acre pond on Saturday, June 24, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Visitors will be able to launch canoes or boats (electric motors only) from 15 Foster's Pond Road, where they will be assigned shorelines to patrol for litter. For those who prefer to remain on dry land, the focus will be on cleaning up a small conservation area near the Foster's Pond dam on Rattlesnake Hill Road. The 150-year-old dam and the adjacent conservation area are owned by the community-based, non-profit Foster's Pond Corp., which was founded in 1939. The area is frequented by anglers hoping to catch largemouth bass, for which the pond is noted.

Volunteers may park on Foster's Pond Road. They should bring work gloves and, if they plan to be on the water, personal flotation devices.

July clinics

The Andover Health Department will offer a mini clinics on Monday, July 10 from 2 to 3 p.m. at Andover Commons Senior-center clinics will be held 2 to 3 p.m. each Wednesday July 5, 12, 19 and 26. No appointment is necessary.

Bach receives glowing review

By Colin Steele

Superintendent Claudia Bach has received a glowing job review but will get no more than the 3.5 percent raise promised in her contract.

Bach met or exceeded every goal on her annual evaluation, released last week by the School Committee. Committee members praised her work on this year's budget and her five-year plan to improve the district after years of budget cuts.

"That's a really great achievement," member Anthony James said.

Bach will receive a 3.5 percent raise July 1 under a four-year contract she signed last year, increasing her salary from $134,277 to $138,977. The School Committee did not discuss giving Bach an additional raise during the evaluation process, James said.

Throughout the fall, Bach hosted input sessions during which she asked teachers and parents what the schools' most pressing needs are. She used that information to put together her so-called rebuilding plan, a $4.8 million proposal to add new jobs, technology and educational programs through 2011.

In April, Town Meeting approved $379,000 for the first year of the plan — despite recommendations by the selectmen and Finance Committee to reject the schools' request.

Keeping kids from a tangled Web

By Brian Davidson

The room in your house where the computer sits can be a dangerous place, representatives from Microsoft Corp. told Andover kids and parents last week.

The Get Net Safe team stopped at the West Elementary and Shawsheen Elementary schools as part of a nationwide tour aimed at promoting Internet safety to the 67 percent of Americans that its recent survey indicated use the Web.

"The Internet is a great enabler," said Mary Ann Blake, a program manager for consumer security at Microsoft. "Kids are using it to explore and do homework and we want to make sure that they take advantage of it. But we also want to make sure that they have a safe and positive experience."

Get Net Safe speakers told kids to apply the same common-sense safety rules they use in the physical world to the Internet. They emphasized the dangers of talking to strangers or posting photographs and personal information online, and warned kids never to meet face to face with a person they meet over the Internet.

"They need to know that there are bad guys on the Internet just as there are in the real world," said Blake.

After speaking to the students at West and Shawsheen elementary schools, the Get Net Safe team offered a "parent's morning" at West Elementary on Thursday to teach parents how to protect their children from online predators.

"A lot of the parents feel intimidated because they feel that their kids are more technically savvy than they are," said Blake. "We were telling them that they don't need to be technical experts to help keep their kids safe online."

Parents were urged to establish household rules for Internet use, such as creating a daily time limit or cut-off time at night, and requiring their kids to keep the door open when using the computer. The Get Net Safe team recommended that parents keep their computer in a common room, and that they discuss with their children the importance of telling a trusted adult if they ever feel scared, uncomfortable or confused by an experience they had online. Parents should also use blocking, filtering and rating tools on their computers to prevent their children from entering inappropriate Web sites or chat rooms. For their own protection from viruses and scam artists, parents were told to turn on an Internet fire wall, make sure software is automatically updated, and install and maintain anti-virus software as well as anti-spy software.

"If something seems too good to be true, it probably is," Blake said. "You need to always keep your guard up as you would if you were outside your house."

The Get Net Safe tour will visit 10 US cities and their suburbs. Along with Microsoft, 11 organizations such as the Boys & Girls Clubs of America and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children are sponsoring the group.

School system not investigating teacher

■ FRANCIS

dents who were in the after-school group worked on behalf of the Somerville Divestment Project, a non-profit organization that stirred controversy in Somerville by trying to force the city to divest its financial holdings in Israel with a petition drive. Francis, a board member of SDP and a Somerville resident, said the organization is a pro-Palestinian human rights group. Some other Somerville residents called SDP anti-Semitic, and expressed concern that Francis was recruiting Andover High students to work for the group. Francis admitted to asking the students if they wanted to work for SDP, and said they were paid $8 to $10 per hour to canvass door to door.

The Andover School Committee is not conducting an official investigation into the matter, as personnel issues are handled by the school administration, but some members worry Francis is violating school policy.

"I have no problem with political views no matter how radical they are," said School Committee member David Samuels. "But I would have a big problem if I found those views being disseminated on school property to students of the school system."

There is no investigation by the administration into Francis' involvement with the after-school group SMEJ, and the community is not asking for one, said Superintendent Claudia Bach.

"Based on my communications with the principal, there is no reason to believe there is any inappropriate conduct," said Bach.

Weiner said SMEJ was not a very active club, but its goal was to "educate the student body about the human rights abuses that were going on in Israel...to raise awareness so they could choose what side of the debate to support."

As for the side SMEJ supported, "we were against the US supporting the human rights violations of Israel on Palestinians, and believed Israel should obey the International Declaration of Rights," he said.

Francis had nothing to do with forming SMEJ, said Weiner. He mainly offered the group resources and shared his opinions.

"Nobody challenged his thought because we tended to agree with him," Weiner said. "But I arrived at that thought independently."

Francis said he encourages students to challenge his opinions. As the adviser of the student debate club, it is his job to do so, he said.

"Students get their information from a variety of sources and form their opinions based on that," he said. "My students don't shape their opinions based on my view of the world. If they did, I would tell them that they weren't thinking."

Weiner said most of the students in SMEJ were interested in physics and primarily knew Francis from the classroom, but that Francis had never mentioned SMEJ during his physics class.

"I guess it was just sort of a coincidence," Weiner said. "It might be that physics is about linking general laws together and that's what this whole issue is about."

Francis said it should come as no surprise that SMEJ was primarily composed of students with an interest in physics. He said it is well documented that throughout history there has been a disproportionate number of physicists fighting for social change.

"It should be expected. Physics is the rational application of fundamental, physical laws," Francis said. "Similarly, as a human rights activist, I believe in the application of fundamental human rights to all people, including Palestinians."

After reading some of Francis' postings on the SDP Web site, Rabbi Robert Goldstein of Andover's Temple Emanuel finds Francis' "one-sided" view problematic.

"He believes everything the Israelis do is bad and everything the Palestinians do is honorable," he said. "I think the situation is more complicated than that. It doesn't lend itself to absolutes."

Goldstein said he has heard that Francis is an outstanding teacher who does not bring politics into the classroom, and added that Francis is entitled to his opinion. But he found it alarming that he was sharing such a biased opinion with students, he said.

"Shouldn't students be exposed to both sides of the argument?"

Francis offers his views

After Ron Francis posted an article on the SDP Web site defending Hamas from media bias, Andover High graduate and Israeli citizen Eric Danis wrote a letter condemning him. "Would a true human rights activist defend and support a group that has deliberately murdered thousands of civilians because of their religion?" Danis asked.

Francis expressed his views on America, Israel and Hamas in an recent interview with the Townsman. Below are excerpts from what he said.

"People living in the United States are severely compromised when judging the actions of the Palestinian resistance because we are funding with our tax dollars the relentless racist oppression of Palestinian people, which meets the international definition of genocide. Our first responsibility is to stop the violent attacks against non-combatants done by Israel and funded by us. That has to come before we raise any questions about the choices Palestinians make," said Francis.

"If you aid and abet a rapist, can you comment on the choices the woman makes to stop the rape from occurring? Because the woman may use a tactic that you oppose on principle, should that make you any less insistent that the rape cease? Don't make the excuse that she used a tactic that you oppose as an excuse to justify the rape.

"I oppose violence against non-combatants, but it is completely understandable that some Palestinians and other people in the world, having exhausted every non-violent approach to end their oppression, would choose violent acts against non-combatants.

"I do not condemn the Palestinian people because the actions they are taking, given the circumstances they face, (are) completely understandable and within the bounds of normal human behavior. I have to ask myself, would I be any different?

"I do condemn the Israeli attacks because they are the ones responsible for stopping the oppression. Under international law, the occupying power is responsible for the people under occupation."

The cabana, seen above, has been ruled an accessary building by the Andover Zoning Board of Appeals.

Zoning: Height of cabana now questioned and the town says it has increased in size from the project that was approved verbally. Neighbors never had a chance to offer input on the project.

■ CABANA

While there are concerns about the structure's proximity to wetlands, and effects of the building on the neighborhood's water table, those concerns are not handled by the zoning board.

How many stories?

The zoning board's decision offers a different view of the building than offered by the Andover building inspector. The inspector determined the cabana was an accessory building located in the rear yard, and that it was not in excess of 1.5 stories, the maximum height allowed for such buildings.

While the zoning board agreed the structure is an accessory structure in Gibsons' rear yard, it decided the building is in violation of the town's height limit for such structures.

"It seems that this is not a story and a half, whether it is two stories, or between one and a half and two," said board member Peter F. Reilly.

"The zoning board and conservation commission have separate statutes," said Bob Douglass, director of the Conservation Commission. "The commission decided it was more than a shed and it would require a filing under the town bylaw. They are two completely boards and statutes."

The neighborhood will await the zoning board's report on the height of the building, which will then be sent to the building inspector for further consideration.

The issue has caused a deep divide in the neighborhood, according to some who live there. The Gibson and Merritt-Hauer families exited Memorial Hall down separate staircases after the Tuesday, June 13 meeting.

The Gibsons' attorney, Mark B. Johnson of Johnson & Borenstein, said that he and his clients will read the report on the decision, and decide their next move after that.

"We're happy the structure was deemed an accessory in the back yard, but we will have to read more about the decision that the structure is over 1.5 stories," Johnson said.

Counsel for the Merritt-Hauers, Michael C. Fee, of Fee, Rosse & Lanz, said he and his clients are happy with the work of the board and feel confident that their concerns were handled professionally.

"We'll see what happens, and what the building inspector does. Assuming she reverses the prior decision and revokes the permit, that may be followed by an appeal from the Gibsons," Fee said.

Pending sale protects some affordable homes

Andover's 10-percent level threatened

By Alison McGonagle

A nonprofit organization plans to buy a 220-unit affordable housing development in Andover and keep 55 of the 220 units affordable, while putting the rest on the market as condominiums.

If the deal is finalized, Andover could maintain a 10-percent affordable housing stock and significant control over the type of affordable housing built in town during the next 15 years. But only if the controversial Avalon Bay development – currently tied up in the courts – is built, according to Susan Stott, Andover Housing Partnership Committee member.

Riverview Commons is set to be purchased by national nonprofit group Preservation of Affordable Housing Inc. The apartment community, developed by John M. Corcoran & Co., and currently owned by Riverview Commons Associates Limited Partnership will change hands, with 55 units remaining income-restricted. That means these 55 units will remain available to households that make 50 percent or less of the median income, $49,859.

The Andover Housing Partnership Committee voted to authorize and sign a cooperation agreement on Monday.

This will now be signed by POAH, the Andover committee, and the partnership that owns Riverview Commons. The agreement is just that – a document stating that the three parties will work together to achieve the mutual goal of keeping 55 units affordable.

"It's been two years coming, and one year of negotiation," said Susan Stott, Andover Housing Partnership Committee member, of the $35 million deal. "This purchase and sale agreement is very good news."

Under the state "anti-snob zoning law," or Ch. 40B, the town is encouraged to maintain 10 percent affordable housing. Affordable housing developers can more easily appeal zoning decisions in communities that have less than 10 percent affordable housing. Towns such as Andover that are above the 10 percent threshold have more control over the types of projects that can be built.

Because 55 Riverview Commons units are deemed "affordable" by the state, the state had counted the project's entire 220 units towards Andover's affordable housing total. However, under the pending deal, POAH will make 55 affordable, and sell the rest as condominiums – mean-

Gift of kidney keeps family whole

■ FATHER'S DAY

said at 3, then they said at 5, and then I just stopped asking," said Kate. "Her kidney decline didn't come as quickly as expected. It came 16 years later."

Small kidneys, a lot of heart

With a strict regimen of pills, Lizzie's kidneys had always afforded her some normalcy – but only to a point.

"It was like I only had a well of energy. If I used it up, that was all I had," she said.

A lack of energy never deprived Lizzie from doing the things she loved though. Lizzie has a passion for photography that she says is inspired by Don, an exhibitions manager at the MIT museum who holds a master's degree in photography. She also enjoys painting and working with ceramics, "but photography is definitely the favorite," she said. One of her paintings, a portrait of Don, is currently on display at the Andover Historical Society.

"Lizzie sees things a little differently," said Kate, looking at one of her more abstract paintings. "Art has gotten her through a lot."

Lizzie wants to attend the Massachusetts College of Art after high school, she said, and even after all the class time she missed this year because of her operations, she plans to graduate on time, in 2007.

"There's been ups and downs, but Lizzie has never seemed aware of them," Kate said. "She never let her sickness define her."

Symptoms of failure

Last August, Lizzie noticed herself becoming more easily and frequently fatigued than usual. She also found it increasingly difficult to fall asleep. In September, as she tried to settle into the fall semester at AHS, she developed constant headaches, painful calcium deposits on her eyes, and the worst symptom of kidney failure, uncontrollable muscle spasms known as "restless legs."

"In the third week of September, she really started to go downhill," said Kate.

Lizzie arranged with the school to attend classes in the afternoons only, generally not falling asleep until the early morning hours.

"The insomnia got to me after a while," she recalled. "I was not a happy camper."

In November, her condition deteriorated to the point where she could no longer attend school. Her kidneys were functioning at below 10 percent, but were oddly producing six liters of urine per day – three times what is considered normal. Doctors determined that a transplant was imminent, and that both of Lizzie's malfunctioning kidneys would need to be removed.

"They decided to go ahead with it in November," her father said. "I had been tested and confirmed as the donor almost three years earlier.

"The decision was easy."

A Children's Hospital policy requiring organ donors to be at least 18 years old ruled out Hannah as a possibility.

Out with old, in with new

In the days approaching Lizzie's first surgery, the Stidsens set up a Web page through Children's Hospital to post updates for friends and family. Kate posted the first message on Dec. 4 at 11:08 p.m.

"After 16 years of anticipation, Lizzie is scheduled for surgery," she wrote. "None of us thought it would happen as the Winter Solstice approaches, but if we've learned one thing in 16 years it is that we have control of very little."

Two days later, Lizzie had both of her kidneys removed during a six-hour operation.

"That was the most pain I've ever had in my life," Lizzie recalled. "They had to cut through all the abdominal muscles on both sides of my body."

Following the operation came five hard weeks of dialysis – three times per week, four hours at a time. Lizzie had good days and bad days, but through it all maintained a calm demeanor that impressed everyone around her.

"All of Lizzie's nurses have great respect and admiration for her," Kate wrote on their Web page.

For Don, who would soon be on the operating table himself, her courage was infectious.

"Lizzie was very brave," he said. "After seeing her go through the double nephrectomy, she really put my mind at ease."

On Jan. 10, Don and Lizzie found themselves side by side in operating rooms so that doctors could remove his right kidney and walk it over to Lizzie.

"I saw her go into surgery with a smile on her face and without a care in the world," Don said. "She said 'Oh, it's easy. They give you the happy medicine and then you go to sleep and when you wake up, it's over.' That's exactly what happened."

Doctors told Kate that it had been "a great day for a kidney transplant" after the surgery. She was there when both Don and Lizzie awoke in separate recovery rooms.

"The first thing both of them asked was how the other was doing," she said.

The road to recovery

Five months after the surgery, Lizzie said she has just about recovered completely. Closely monitored by her doctors, her body has shown no sign of rejecting Don's kidney. Her visits to the hospital have gone from twice a week to once every other. She is responding well to her medications, feeling fortunate to be on a newly available drug protocol that does not include prednisone, a steroid with unpleasant side effects that many with kidney transplants have to take for the rest of their lives. She said she thinks she is "100-percent," but can't be sure because she doesn't know what being 100-percent healthy actually feels like.

"I've never had much energy my whole life," she said. "So to have energy – to be able to exercise and still have some energy left – is definitely nice. And the other thing is that now I can fall asleep in a half-hour. It used to take me hours and hours to fall asleep."

Lizzie started going back to school part-time at the end of March and will be taking summer courses at Massachusetts College of Art over the summer.

With Don back to work full-time and Lizzie going to school again, things are almost back to normal for the Stidsen family at their Wolcott Avenue home. They thank neighbors, friends and fellow members of North Parish Church for preparing meals and shoveling them out after snow storms. They thank the staff at Children's Hospital, including the "unsung heroes" like the valet service and the people at the front desk, for taking such wonderful care of Lizzie and Don. Lizzie thanks Kate and Hannah, for holding her hand – often literally –through the trying times of the past year. And she thanks Don most of all, for her love of art and his gift to her that changed the complexion of her world.

When asked if she had anything special planned for Father's Day this Sunday, Lizzie responded simply, "Anything he wants."

BOOK REVIEW

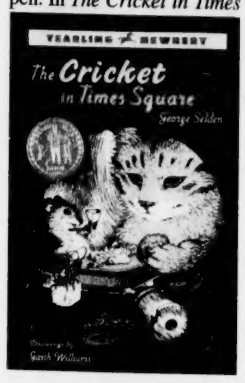

The Cricket in Times Square

BY GEORGE SELDEN

Reviewed by John Chartier and James Caron

This week, book reviewers John and James review a classic book with an endearing story about the power of friendship and the surprises that await all of us around every corner.

THE BIG APPLE IS A FAVORITE SETTING for all types of stories. In particular, when someone gets lost in the big city, some amazing things can start to happen. In The Cricket in Times Square by George Selden,

Chester, a cricket, finds himself in Manhattan, and he meets some amazing friends in some very unusual places.

Chester doesn't have the faintest idea of what happened. All he does is try to hitch a ride in a picnic basket, and he ends up in New York City. He has no idea that he is about to make a very big difference in the life of a needy boy and his deserving family.

The Bellini family owns a newsstand in Times Square that isn't doing so well. With the help of Chester, Harry (a cat), and Tucker (a mouse), Mario Bellini and his family may actually be able to save the family business.

Selden's story is one that teaches a powerful lesson to the reader, but is engrossing at the same time. Few books can indeed fulfill such standards.

The illustrations in this book are noteworthy as well, all drawn by illustrator Garth Williams. The detail and character present in each picture are remarkable, and really serve to compliment Selden's story.

Largely because of the great mix of illustrations and the engaging story, The Cricket in Times Square is recommended for kids ages 8 and older. It is a universal story that will appeal to any kind of reader.

We give The Cricket in Times Square by George Selden a solid eight out of 10 rating. It is an endearing story about the power of friendship in the Big City.

So take the subway, taxi, or just walk on down to your local bookstore or library and pick up your very own copy of The Cricket in Times Square by George Selden today.

And remember, you never quite know where you will end up – just enjoy what you have for today.

Relief effort: Andover High students come to the rescue of Lazarus House

By Pete Smith
WHAT'S UP contributor

IN AN ATTEMPT TO GIVE BACK to an organization that has given so much to its surrounding communities, a group of about 20 Andover High School students traveled to the Lazarus House in Lawrence and helped clean up the damaged shelter.

Lazarus House, a Lawrence multi-service ministry to the poor, owns three of the many buildings hit hard by the May floods.

In a relief effort spearheaded by their Democracy & the Media teacher Brian Parker, a group of about 20 AHS juniors raised $2,670 for Lazarus House through a large can drive and other methods.

These juniors also traveled to Lazarus House on Friday, June 9, to physically clean up the damaged shelter. The group tackled miscellaneous odd jobs – ranging from tearing down broken drywall to moving packaged food to a safer location – at three of the seven buildings that make up the Lazarus House organization.

"They just worked nonstop – four hours' worth. They were awesome.

There was nothing they weren't willing to do," said Bridget Shaheen, Lazarus House director.

"It feels good to help the community," junior Paul Furness said. "We all need help sometimes."

Another current junior, Steve Vieira said, "It felt good to try and clean everything up. It doesn't look like there's been a lot of help out here. Simple things like picking up drywall and moving food just haven't been done. It's pretty sad."

Lazarus House's food pantry is open in its chapel currently, and Lazarus House hopes to relocate it soon. While a specific date has not been set yet to reopen its shelter, Lazarus House hopes to reopen it by mid-July, said Shaheen.

▶ People interested in helping can call 978-689-8575 or send a check to Lazarus House, PO Box 408, Lawrence, MA 01842. People looking to donate clothing, furniture or household items can bring them to 121 Essex St., Lawrence.

Andover resident Alan Clarke says the path he chose was hard, but rewarding. And he'd do it all over again.

By Alison McGonagle

SOME GUYS HAVE ALL THE LUCK, and by looking at Andover resident Alan Clarke's resume, you might think the high achiever is just one of those guys. The 2006 Morehouse College valedictorian has won awards for both math and poetry and had a successful career in sales. In 2007 he'll enter Harvard Law School.

But Clarke makes it clear – his life has not been all fun and free drinks.

"I made a conscious decision that I would be as dedicated as possible, and remain goal-oriented," said Clarke, a 2002 Andover High School graduate, of his beginnings at Morehouse, an African American men's college in Georgia, where he majored in English. "It was very taxing, but rewarding. I would do it all again."

Clarke's exceptionally hard work was inspired by Morehouse's high achieving student body, he said.

"At AHS you had smart kids, bookworms, and athletes," Clarke said. "In college everyone was good at everything. There were All-Americans in track that were Phi Beta Kappa grads as well."

To achieve academic excellence, he had to sacrifice many of the hallmarks of college life.

"I couldn't go out and party," he said. "I couldn't have a lot of experiences my friends were having. It was a lot of work, and a lot of struggle with little reward, aside my own rewards, that I felt."

Clarke's rare determination likely began long ago, during his childhood in Roxbury.

"It was interesting, coming from a predominately black neighborhood to Andover," said Clarke, who moved to town when he was 11 years old. "It was an interesting change of setting. I had to find my own identity."

After losing his mother at age 13, Clarke had to readjust, now growing up the only child in a single-parent family.

"I had to get used to interacting with my father. My mom was always the buffer," said Clarke. "It's hard to replicate the mother-son relationship. It's been a challenge to live with and communicate with my dad, but he's probably the biggest support in my life, and factor in my success."

Clarke's father, a doctor, battles diabetes, but Clarke said that regardless, his father always puts him first.

"It's touching to know that as a grown man, I have that type of support behind me," he said.

Education for Public Inquiry and International Citizenship (EPIIC), a program developed by Tufts University, promotes global service and learning through classes for undergraduate and graduate students, study abroad programs, service projects, and a global issues simulation inquiry for high school students. A new world issue is selected each year as the focus of the program. The topic for this year's 20th anniversary session, "The Politics of Fear in Asia," was terrorism and security in the continent of Asia. Kathryn Malleck of Andover was one of the students attending this year's high school simulation April 6-9 on the Tufts campus is Medford.

GDA has been involved with the EPIIC program since its beginning, sending students to discuss world issues with people from schools around the country. The symposium is directed by Tufts students who have been actively studying the topic all year. Before the conference, students submit position papers on topics pertaining to the issue from the viewpoint of their school's assigned role. This year, GDA represented Taiwan on issues such as security, terrorism, pandemics, modernization, disaster prevention, and human trafficking.

During the symposium, students from approximately 20 different high schools, each representing a different country or industry, separate into groups to discuss the topics and write proposals to help solve their world issues.

Faculty leaders believe the program helps students ready themselves for important issues beyond campus.

Demonstrating the strong sense of social activism that is one of the aspects of a Pike School education, graduating eighth-graders chose a Lowell program for homeless young people as the primary recipient of this year's Student Council gift.

The GRIP Project (Growing Responsibility and Independence in People) provides residential services and life-skills guidance for 16- to 21-year-olds, fostering independence and encouraging individual growth through a self-policing mini-community that demands teamwork, accountability, dedication, and duty. Its participants receive the skills and experience to complete a resume, obtain a job, schedule appointments, enroll in an educational program, open a bank account, set goals, solve problems, and generally become contributing members of the broader community.

Following months of researching local charitable organizations, hospitals, and social programs, the council chose GRIP after hearing a presentation by program director Rachel McNamara. Deciding factors, according to eighth-grade representatives Carly Rauh and D.J. Dlesk were the nearness of GRIP residents' ages to their own, as well as the fact that the GRIP teens, themselves, are involved in community service.

"The kids who live at GRIP are given the opportunity to give back to the community," says Dlesk, "and that was the important thing I took away from the presentation."

Both Rauh and Dlesk are no strangers to social activism and community service. Rauh, who has been a student at Pike since kindergarten, has been involved in improving adoption opportunities for Chinese babies with cleft palates, raising money through bake sales and by selling donated items on eBay. Dlesk has organized a highly successful book drive to aid Hispanic children in learning English.

Pike School works to imbue its students with a sense of service as a normal part of life. Children in Lower School (pre-K through 2) take part in food drives for such community service organizations as Lazarus House and Neighbors in Need, and visit residents of Wingate Nursing Home. They organized a children's book collection for Hurricane Katrina victims.

In Middle School (grades 3-5) students participate in service projects that benefit a number of causes through car washes, bake sales, fleece hat and scarf drives, environmental activities, and pet rescue.

In addition to the Student Council activities, Upper School students (grades 6-9) maintain both off- and on-campus service clubs, which buy snacks in bulk and sells them to the students, with the profits all going to charities.

This year, Upper School students have introduced a program through which donated, discarded cell phones help support an organization that aids abused women. So far, they have collected about 100 phones.

The National Merit Scholarship Corp. (NMSC) announced that 12 Phillips Academy students are among the approximately 8,200 students nationwide to be selected as winners in its 51st annual National Merit Scholarship Program. Each of these winners will receive a share of nearly $33 million in scholarship money distributed by NMSC.

The NMSC offers four distinct categories of Merit Scholarships.

Following are the names of 12 Phillips Academy scholarship recipients divided by category:

National Merit $2,500 Scholarships:

- Elizabeth Ryznar of Niles, Ill.

Corporate-Sponsored Merit Scholarships:
- Harrison B. Greer of Birmingham, Ala.;

Officials of National Merit Scholarship Corp. announced the names of 2,500 distinguished high school seniors who have won National Merit $2,500 Scholarships. As noted above, one of the recipients is Andrew A. Hsiao of Andover, a student at Phillips Academy. Hsiao's probable career field is computer science, he said.

Merit Scholar designees were chosen from a talent pool of approximately 15,000 outstanding Finalists in the 2006 National Merit Scholarship Program.

More than 1.3 million juniors in nearly 21,000 US high schools entered the 2006 National Merit Program by taking the 2004 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT). Earlier this year, NMSC had announced that 24 Phillips Academy students had been named as Merit Scholarship Finalists. Fewer than one percent of all US high school seniors earn that distinction.

The Commission of Presidential Scholars has selected Charles Frentz, who graduated June 4 from Phillips Academy, as one of its 141 Presidential Scholars for 2006, one of the highest honors for high school students, according to a press release.

Frentz was one two students named as scholars from the state of Maine, where he lives in Kennebunk with his mother, Alice Frentz. All of the scholars have been invited to attend a ceremony in late June in Washington, D.C., where they will be honored for their accomplishments.

"The 2006 Presidential Scholars embody the academic excellence and innovative thinking our students need to compete and thrive in college and the workforce," said US Secretary of Education Margaret Spelling, when announcing the selections. "They remind us of the great potential residing in all our nation's youth."

The 141 Presidential Scholars include one young man and one young woman from each state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, and from US families living abroad, as well as 15 chosen at large and 20 Presidential Scholars in the Arts. A 27-member commission selected the Scholars based on their academic success, artistic excellence, essays, school evaluations and transcripts, as well as evidence of community service, leadership, and demonstrated commitment to high ideals.

For 42 years, this program has honored more than 5,000 of the nation's top-performing students. Of the three million students expected to graduate from high school this year, more than 2,700 candidates qualified on the basis of outstanding performance on the College Board SAT and ACT exams, or by nomination through the nationwide Arts Recognition and Talent Search conducted by the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts.

Opinion

Open Meeting Law should see light

A BILL THAT WOULD STRENGTHEN the state's Open Meeting Law (HB 4809) currently sits in the House Ways & Means Committee awaiting action so it can move to the floor. Legislators must be given the opportunity to vote on this issue this session.

The legislation would update the law to address modern means of communication, such as e-mail, and, more significantly, allow courts to assess a $500 civil fine against individual board or committee members who knowingly violate its provisions.

The intent is not to play gotcha games with public officials who have the public's best interest at heart, but hit flagrant violators where it hurts – in the pocketbook via a $500 fine per violation.

Under the current statute, District Attorney Jonathan Blodgett's only recourse when the Danvers School Committee violated the law recently was to sue the committee. This means that if he prevails in his suit, taxpayers will bear the cost of any fine. That needs to change.

Robert Ambrogi, the attorney who heads the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association, calls the Commonwealth's Open Meeting Law one of the weakest in the nation. This should change as well.

North-of-Boston legislators who serve on the Ways & Means committee, including Andover's Barry Finegold, Danvers' Ted Speliotis, Beverly's Mary Grant, and Lawrence's William Lantigua, should urge chairman Robert DeLeo to report this bill out quickly so it can be considered before the legislature breaks for the rest of the year in July.

It is the public's right to know that's being violated when elected or appointed officials meet behind closed doors. Andover residents might remember that the School Committee agreed to extend the superintendent's contract behind closed doors – and it never informed the public about its "memorandum of understanding." The public only learned about the agreement seven months later when the Townsman uncovered the document while researching a related issue.

If public officials are going to err, they ought to do so on the side of transparency rather than secrecy. After all, when's the last time you heard of a board of selectmen or school committee running afoul of the law for not conducting their deliberations in private?

Don't give that man a cigar

Editor, Townsman:

I was shocked when I looked at page 24 of the June 8 Townsman and saw a picture of a Phillips Academy graduate smoking a cigar. While the subject of the photograph may indeed have been legally old enough to smoke (his age was not mentioned in the caption), poor judgment was exercised in publishing this picture in a community newspaper, one which youngsters may very well read and look at. Is that the message the Townsman wants to send to its readers, that it's OK for teenagers to smoke? I think not.

Protect all wetlands, not just ones nearby

Editor, Townsman:

Residents of Hazelwood Circle have said that their neighbors' new cabana is adversely affecting the wildlife and wetlands behind their homes. I wonder if they made the same claim 10 years ago when hundreds of acres of forest were torn down and wildlife habitat destroyed to build their homes in the first place.

Using the environment as a scapegoat only dilutes honest efforts to protect it by linking them to self-interest. Those of us truly interested in protecting the environment strive to make responsible choices every day with that goal in mind. I cannot speak for the creatures that inhabit the wild areas around Hazelwood Circle, but if I could, I am guessing they would be saying something that we have heard a lot of lately: Not in my name.

Tearing down cabana tears down trust in officials

Editor, Townsman:

Daniel Casper, Zoning Board:

For the last year or so, we have watched with concern and dismay as the town of Andover has acted with disdain and disregard for the rights of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Gibson.

These long-time citizens of Andover, sought and received permits from the town of Andover for the construction of their pool and related cabana. Further, they engaged competent professionals to advise them and to effect the construction of both pool and cabana. They and their advisors sought and received the advice and approval of James Greer, the then director of conservation for the town of Andover. As Greer has stated in his letter to Robert Douglas, his successor, the Gibsons "proceeded in good faith, and in reliance upon the review process in effect in 2004." Despite all of this, they find themselves in a costly defense of a process initiated by Douglas with the sole intent to cause the cabana to be removed.

I began this letter by expressing our concern. This concern goes directly to the fear created by Douglas. Is it the intention of town officials to send a message that no citizen should rest comfortably in reliance of permits and approvals issued by the town? Should we worry that employee changes are de facto causes for worry that permits and approvals previously issued may be retrospectively rescinded?

As you will note from our address, we are residents of Fieldstone Meadows. We have been since 1993. We are familiar with the pool and the cabana and believe both enhance our community. However, even if they did not, they should be permitted to stand because they were properly permitted and approved by responsible town officials.

We respectfully request that their permits be reaffirmed and that the Gibsons be permitted to complete their pool/cabana project and that they and their family have the opportunity to enjoy both pool and cabana.

Such action by the town of Andover will also serve notice to all its citizens that we can rely on actions and approvals given by town officials and we need not worry that a change in employees may result in retrospective denials of previously permitted and approved projects.

Cabana owners sought, received town approval

Editor, Townsman:

I am writing as a concerned resident and taxpayer of the town of Andover.

The simple truth is that the Gibsons applied for a permit to put in a pool and build a cabana. Both permits were issued by the town. The pool permit was issued on Oct. 15, 2004 and the cabana permit was issued on Jan. 27, 2005. These are permits issued by the town of Andover with the regard to the project that has been under much discussion. The Gibsons did everything they needed to do and more to obtain the permission from the town to go forward with the project. They are the innocent parties who relied upon the town's express approval of the project by issuing each of the permits. The cabana should stand and they should be permitted to complete it with the town paying all their legal costs.

The other critical issue is that the Conservation Commission through its former director, James A. Greer, expressly approved the project. It is important that the residents of the town of Andover have the ability to read Greer's letter dated July 12, 2005, addressed to Bob Douglas, the current director of the Conservation Commission, in its entirety.

By the way, the Gibson's file, including a copy of this letter, is available for inspection at Town Offices by any of Andover resident. A simple review of the file will show that the Gibsons took all necessary steps in the planning process and received all necessary approvals and permits from the town.

TEACHER IN DIVESTMENT PROJECT

How can one support Hamas?

Editor, Townsman:

In a recent article, the Townsman quotes Andover High School physics teacher Ron Francis as follows: "We are in favor of all people, including Palestinians," he said. "We don't take positions for or against any religion or ethnic group. I argue that Palestinians have the human right to return to their homes from which they were ethnically cleansed. If that's anti-Semitic, I'd like someone to tell me how."

The Charter of Hamas, written in 1988, states that the area in question does not belong to "all people" but belongs only to Palestinians. Jews must leave or be killed as explained in its charter. The following is an excerpt from the Hamas Charter at its Article Seven:

"The Day of Judgement will not come about until Moslems fight the Jews (killing them), when the Jew will hide behind stones and trees. The stones and trees will say,'O Moslems, O Abdulla, there is a Jew behind me, come and kill him.'"

Hamas was voted into party of the majority of the Palestinian people in an open election held in February 2006.

Francis says he is in favor of "all peoples."

He should explain why he supports a political group that was elected on a platform that endorses killing of all Jews or driving them out and one that supports a philosophy that holds that the area in question is only for Muslims.

Saw him in action

Editor, Townsman:

As a former longtime member of Andover's Temple Emanuel and as someone who saw Ron Francis in action in Somerville, I would like to offer a few observations about this most unpleasant matter.

It is bad enough that Francis appears to have recruited Andover High School students in the service of his own political agenda. But what is at least as troubling to me is that the cause that Francis encouraged these kids to actively support (and get paid for) is so fraught with repugnant anti-Semitic overtones.

None of the people I got to know in Somerville while I was working to oppose the "divest from Israel" resolution equated criticism of Israel with anti-Semitism. But Francis' words and actions continually went way beyond this. His obsession with and hatred for "Zionists" and "Zionism" speaks for itself.

Web question

Is it summer yet? How can you tell?

Last week's Andover Townsman Web-site question asked: Flood victims are finding out that their required flood insurance does not cover basement damage. Do you think the National Flood Insurance Policy should cover flood damage that occurs below street level? 31 people responded.

- 11 people, or 35 percent, said, "Yes, because it's common sense that any flood damage would first occur in basements."
- 15 people, or 48 percent, said, "Yes, the purpose of flood insurance is to cover any damage, regardless of where it occurs."
- No one said, "Yes, for another reason."
- 4 people or 13 percent, said, "No, people should expect and prevent flood damage below street level, especially in flood-prone areas."
- 1 person, or 3 percent, said, "No, for another reason."

This week's Andover Townsman Web-site question is:

Which of these signs of summer announce the season's arrival in town?

- Opening of Pomps Pond.
- Andover Days.
- Live music at the bandstand in the Park.
- Ice cream stands opening.
- Fewer school busses on the roads.
- Outdoor seating at local restaurants.
- Other.

Loop for I-93 interchange shortchanges Andover

Editor, Townsman:

The Merrimack Valley Planning Commission should adopt the findings of the Ballardvale-Lowell Junction Task Force report on a proposed new Interstate-93 interchange, which offered "grave reservations" about Option Nine. The task force report concluded that Options Three and Four are worthy of further consideration. Of those, Option Three is the more appropriate. Option Nine is fatally flawed. Option Nine should be regarded as a non-starter and omitted from further consideration.

Option Three (the so-called trumpet design) would be less expensive to build, less expensive to maintain, have less environmental impact, place a lower burden on public infrastructure, and would be less detrimental to Andover's quality of life.

Conversely, Option Nine (the so-called loop design) would be the most expensive to build, most expensive to maintain, have the greatest environmental impact, place the greatest burden on public infrastructure, and result in the greatest diminution to Andover's quality of life. If a new interchange is truly justified, Option Three is the most intelligent, responsible, and intellectually honest way to go about it.

Option Nine is not without its backers. It is the scheme favored by the Mills Corp. of Virginia, the town of Tewksbury, a handful of real estate speculators and other special interests. All have been working feverishly to promote Option Nine for their own benefit, in spite of its drawbacks to the residents of Andover.

Option Nine is corporate welfare for the Mills Corp. Option Nine paves the way for a monstrosity like the Methuen Mall to be placed at Andover's doorstep. It doesn't take a clairvoyant to envision the impact Option Nine will have on Andover's local streets. If you live in Andover, just picture the Route 213 Loop at the end of your driveway. And imagine what it will be like during the Christmas shopping season.

The handful of real estate speculators who favor Option Nine claim it will add millions to Andover's tax base. If they are so confident, let them place their money where their mouth is. Put up a bond in that amount or, at the very least, forswear ever seeking property tax abatements if those pipe dreams fail to materialize.

Last, but not least, there is the town of Tewksbury, telling Andover it should be the willing doormat to the no-access-from-Tewskbury shopping mall. If I was Tewksbury Planning Board Vice Chairman Robert Fowler, I'd be giddy for that too. Applying his calculus, Tewksbury gets the mine and Andover gets the shaft. Honestly, does he take us in Andover for pigeons?

Thankfully, Andover's Board of Selectmen has stood up for the best interests of the town, in favor of the Ballardvale-Lowell Junction Task Force that only advances the Option Nine loop with "grave concerns." We owe Andover's selectmen our gratitude and our support.

New American Revolution needed over oil

Editor, Townsman:

We need another American Revolution. We again need to reject tyranny and reaffirm our "unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and to "pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor."

We live under the tyranny of oil. We are addicted to oil. We can't live without oil. And yet we import millions of barrels of oil each day from foreign countries, many of which are autocratic regimes, hotbeds of discontent, and home to anti-American fervor.

And then there is talk about the end of the oil era. Are we ready for a world without oil? What are we to do?

We need to act. We need to be ready to make sacrifices and take on risk, just as the signers of the Declaration of Independence did. Adams and Jefferson and Washington risked their lives during the first American Revolution. What are we ready to risk during the second?

According to the New York Times, there is a town in Indiana ready to risk it all for the sake of ridding itself of the yoke of foreign oil and the power grid. Reynolds, Indiana, population 535, also known as "Biotown," is taking action. A solid streak of independence and optimism runs through the residents.

It's all about making do with what they have: hogs, corn and municipal waste. With state and federal grants, along with the support of visionary investors willing to take risks, the town is ready to build an energy plant using animal waste, corn residues and municipal refuse. Nearly 100 residents have begun driving "flexible" cars that run on E-85, an 85-percent alcohol/15-percent gasoline mixture. Still others are driving vehicles that run on bio-diesel fuel like vegetable oil.

If a small farming town with determination and courage can take action, why can't we?

Why can't we demand that the electricity for our homes and offices be derived from wind, hydro, and other renewable resources?

Why can't we demand that the Congress mandate higher efficiency standards for our trucks and automobiles?

Why can't we buy vehicles with miles per gallon ratings of 35, 40, or 50?

Why can't we demand the availability of "flex" vehicles powered by E-85?

Why can't we demand that chemical refineries direct a portion of their capacity to the manufacture of ethanol and preparation of fuels like E-85?

Why can't we redirect taxpayer-financed agricultural support payments to encourage the growth of switchgrass, a recognized agricultural source material for the manufacture of ethanol? Why can't we demand that the Congress reduce taxpayer subsidies to the oil industry and encourage local fuel dispensing facilities to install new tanks and pumps that are dedicated to E-85?

In the current political environment, waiting for the Congress to act is folly. Everyone can make a difference. All you need is the courage to act like Reynolds, Indiana did, or John Adams, or Thomas Jefferson, or George Washington.

It's time again to reject tyranny and reaffirm our commitment to ourselves, our lives, and our sacred honor. It's time for another American Revolution.

The Festival of Fine Art is a Vermont statewide event held during the month of June. In Burlington, in addition to the major show and awards at the Union Station Gallery, the Church Street Marketplace is transformed into a large public gallery with the work of 39 juried artists displayed in many of the store windows. Andover's Carol Bolleau (above) of 19 Greybirch Road was awarded third place in this juried show and was selected to participate in the storefront exhibits.

TV cameraman Kent Earle of Andover proudly shows off the two Emmys he recently won for his work on WBZ-TV/CBS 4's morning show.

Local TV cameraman wins 2 Emmys

Four nominations and Kent Earle finally gets the gold

By Judy Wakefield

A LOCAL TELEVISION CAMERAMAN was beginning to feel like the Susan Lucci of his trade.

Cameraman Kent Earle of Lenox Circle had 14 Emmy nominations in the past five years for his photojournalism skills, but not a single Emmy to call his own. Just like Lucci, an actress on the soap opera All My Children, who finally won an Emmy after nearly 20 nominations, Earle finally landed his this month. Actually, Earle won two Emmys at the recent awards ceremony in Boston.

"I really was beginning to feel like Susan Lucci," laughed Earle, a nine-year town resident who has been working at WBZ-TV/CBS 4 since 1989. "But really, I am so excited to win these awards."

Earle earned the Emmys for feature-story filming. After years of covering fires, murders, car accidents and other spot news for the 6 and 11 p.m. newscasts on Channel 4, he now films various softer feature stories for the station's morning show, The UPN 38 Morning Show.

Earle was saluted for putting together a composite of three feature stories that aired on the station.

The stories were part of the morning show's "Robi on the Road" segment where reporter/host David "Robi" Robichaud (who also won an Emmy for this segment) hits the road in search of interesting people and/or interesting trades.

The composite included footage of a Shrewsbury native who makes Adirondack chairs out of real wooden baseball bats; glass-blowing in Sagamore; and a company in western Massachusetts that makes carts for immobilized dogs and cats.

The second Emmy was awarded for "news editing with no time limit."

He said this second Emmy surprised him as he considers himself a photographer first and editor second.

"I figured it would go to a guy or a gal who is strictly an editor," he said. "And I actually thought this part of the night would be a good time to go to the bathroom."

Now, he's glad he didn't take that break – although he said he had no acceptance speech ready. At least he was in the room when his name was called.

"I was totally blown away," he said.

Those Emmys serve as attractive gold bookends on a fireplace mantel in the media room of his comfortable home which he shares with his wife, Diane, and their 3-year-old daughter, Addison.

This 43-year-old Fitchburg State College graduate, who started his television news job at a small Cape Cod station, smiles every time he looks at them as he feels "validated."

"I feel like I can die now. My obit is complete: Emmy award-winning news photographer," he said.

The future is a bit uncertain as the ratings and advertising dollars have not met expectations on The UPN 38 Morning Show. Staffers, including Earle, have been notified that the show is going off the air June 30. He's not sure what his next project will be. Now armed with two Emmys, he certainly feels more marketable.

"I have 'book ends' now," he said. "I feel like I finally made it in this business I love."

Pretending writing plays is easy

Christopher Lockheardt of Andover packs a lot of play into 10 minutes

By Lucy Properzio
WHAT'S UP contributor

LOOKING FOR SOMETHING different to do this weekend? So is Mona, the main character in a short play by Andover resident Christopher Lockheardt. But at least you can watch Mona – and the characters in nine other plays, all part of a Natick drama festival on Saturday.

Lockheardt, who moved to town last spring, will have his work Luke Meets Charlene at a Really Nice Bar presented at the Center for Arts in Natick, starting tomorrow, Friday, June 16 and Saturday, June 17 at 8 p.m.

The center is hosting 10 short works by nine New England playwrights in its second annual festival of original dramatic works. Admission is $15; $13 for Center for Arts members; and there's a $1 discount for students and seniors.

"I started writing three years ago and I have had more success than I ever thought I would. I was a theater major and wrote some plays in college and in graduate school, but simply as part of the curriculum. I am more than pleased that I am having plays produced in Massachusetts and other states as well," Lockheardt said.

Lockheardt attended the University of Massachusetts Amherst as an undergraduate and attained his graduate degree from Emerson College.

Lockheardt started writing plays in Maynard, Mass., submitting much of his work to ACME Theater, a community theater there. Luke Meets Charlene at a Really Nice Bar is a 10-minute play that Lockheardt wrote for last year's festival at ACME Theater.

COURTESY PHOTO

Unlike his characters, Christopher Lockheardt doesn't have to pretend he has something to do on Friday night. His play Luke Meets Charlene at a Really Nice Bar will be staged at the Center for the Arts in Natick.

"Whichever play they enjoy, I send out to other places. I trust their taste," he said.

According to Lockheardt, the play is about a married woman who is stuck at home on a Friday night with her boring husband. She decides to spice up the evening by pretending. She pretends she is someone else and forces her husband to join. Her husband tries to take over the game.

"Poor Mona," said Lockheardt, "another evening stuck at home with Ralph. It's time for a change, but will Ralph play along?"

Typically, Lockheardt comes up with ideas for his plays in the car or shower.

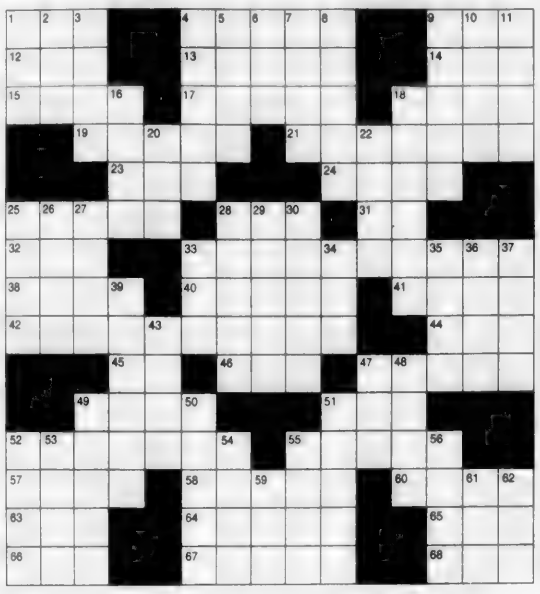

"I was driving to rehearsal and a random voice popped into my head, as they usually do with writers. The voice said, 'Let's pretend,' and I thought, 'Well, isn't that interesting? What would a grown-up pretend about?' Then I thought, 'Well, what would a couple want to pretend about?' "

The play unfolded from there, but not without difficulty.

"The hardest part is trying to find an opening and ending thought, which is especially difficult to do with a 10-minute

Former Andoverite behind documentary's opening

A former town resident is the supervising film editor behind a documentary set to open in a Cambridge theater tomorrow night.

Lindsay Mofford, daughter of Andover Historical Society historian Julie Mofford and Thomas Mofford, former Andover High School teacher and now a professor at Northern Essex Community College, played the key role in creating the documentary, Sir! No Sir, which is a powerful film about GIs who rebelled against the Vietnam War while serving in it.

The film is opening at the Brattle Theatre, 40 Brattle St., Cambridge, on Friday, June 16. Lindsay's husband, Tucker Stilley, was the sound designer for the film.

Lindsay Mofford attended elementary school in Andover. She graduated from High Mowing Waldorf School in Wilton, N.H., and later from Emerson College. She and Stilley live in California and she is currently editing a television series for the Nickelodeon channel.

Mofford has also worked on The Rock, which starred Sean Connery and Nicholas Cage and SE7EN, with Brad Pitt and Morgan Freeman.

She was also an editor on the 12-part PBS series, Senior Year, which was co-produced by her brother, Eric Mofford, also an Emerson graduate.

The play's the thing

■ LOCKHEARDT

play. It would be much easier to write a 60-minute play. The audience wants to be entertained and must receive everything they are accustomed to in such a short span of time," he said.

According to Lockheardt, there are two ways to go wrong when writing a ten-minute play.

"First, you do not want to write a skit. A skit is not a play. It is a 10-minute joke about the premise," he said. "Second, you do not want to write a speech. Nobody wants to pay good money to be lectured to."

Lockheardt said he wants to challenge himself by writing a full length play.

"Ten-minute plays are a wonderful way to get your feet wet, but as I said before, plays are neither skits nor diatribes. Playwrights must resist the urge to put themselves on stage. They must provide the audience with a good story and give the actors the opportunity to tell that story. A playwright works for two groups of people – the audience and the actors; they do not work for him."

Riverview sale

■ HOUSING DEAL

ing that 165 units will be lost toward the affordable housing inventory.

If the deal goes through, and Avalon Bay is built as approved, the town would be at 10.2 percent affordable units. However, Avalon Bay's 115 rental units are also in jeopardy. If the courts rule against Avalon Bay and it is not built, the town would be at 9.2 percent.

"We'll need to find another 90 units if Avalon Bay doesn't go through. We'll need 90 units someplace," said Stott. "The town will have to work pretty hard to stay above 10 percent in the next two years."

If Avalon Bay and Riverview Commons are kept online, Andover will not need to worry about another major affordable apartment community becoming a market-rate development until 2021, when Andover Commons' affordability deal is up for renegotiation. Andover Commons is located on Railroad Street near Wild Oats supermarket and is home to many Andover senior citizens.

Riverview Commons deal

Had the owners of Riverview Commons decided to sell all units as market-rate units, it would have been a significant blow to Andover's affordable housing efforts.

Those involved with the deal believe it is a good one for all involved.

"After a determined effort by all parties, we are pleased to enter into this agreement with POAH," said Richard High, president of John M. Corcoran & Co. "It not only allows us to achieve a fair price for Riverview Commons' investors, it provides for long-term preservation of affordable units at Riverview Commons through POAH, a highly-qualified buyer, with credible financial capacity and strong leadership."

The Riverview Commons deal with POAH maintains only the 25 percent affordable housing, though the company says if it can offer more units as afforable, it will. But that it isn't favored by the real-estate market.

"The fundamental challenge of the transaction is to do it at all," said Amy Anthony, executive director of POAH, "because the current market values condos more than rental. We would do it all as rental if we could, but we can't because the numbers won't allow it. We will try to do more, and we are still investigating that. We have lots of work to do, and hurdles to overcome. We will be pushing at every angle that will allow us to do more affordable housing at the Commons."

I-93 interchange gains momentum

MVPC: 'Winnowed down to one plan' – loop option for ramps

By Brad Haynes

Plans for a new Interstate 93 interchange in Andover appear to be in the legislative fast lane. But the specific ramp alternative apparently supported by officials remains one that some Ballardvale residents would like to see stopped in its tracks.

House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi, D-Boston, said funds for the first phase of the Andover interchange project will be part of an upcoming state economic stimulus plan. DiMasi made his comments during a Friday, June 9, during a visit to Ballardvale-area drug maker Wyeth Biopharma.

DiMasi, as well as Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey and other local lawmakers, were at the biotech facility to acknowledge the addition of 150 new jobs at Wyeth and to discuss the proposed interchange seen by many as an important step in further economic development of the Merrimack Valley.

"I look forward to getting the interchange project up and running," Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey said in a Friday visit to town, "so people can get here more conveniently and live here more conveniently."

Bob Halpin, president of the Merrimack Valley Economic Development Council, said close to 6,500 employees now work around the junction of Andover, Tewksbury and Wilmington, but traffic issues on local roads have made expansion difficult.

With proper interstate access, Halpin predicted growth on the scale of 4,500 to 11,500 new jobs, along with $4.2 million to $6.6 million in local property tax revenue.

Last week the Merrimack Valley Planning Commission published an Interstate Justification Report detailing 10 possible plans for the new exit, three of which were advanced by Andover's Lowell Junction Task Force. After input from public and private interests, Halpin said legislators at Friday's meeting agreed to move forward with a modified loop plan known as Alternative 9, the alternative advanced with "grave concerns."

"Informally we've winnowed it down to one plan," Halpin said. "It's still subject to change, but this is the one most have adopted as a consensus."

Some Andover officials have expressed traffic concerns regarding Alternative 9, because it provides no access to local Tewksbury roads on the west side of the interstate, where Tewksbury has rezoned land for a proposed mall.

"We all agree that an interchange needs to go in there," said Chris Huntress, chairman of Andover's task force. "But with that plan Andover would be the only town with local access to the 3.5 million square feet of land to be developed."

Halpin estimated that the first phase of the state- and federally-funded project, consisting of a $15 million northbound ramp and connector to Ballardvale Road, may be in place by 2008 or 2009.

State Rep. Barbara L'Italien, D-Andover, said state funds may be allotted as early as next week, once the House and Senate work out their differences over the economic stimulus bill.

"This project is really at the top in terms of priority and scale," she said.

After the press conference Healey expressed her hopes but also skepticism about the bill, which has stalled in the Legislature for a year. "We keep being told, 'Any day, any week,'" she said. "I hope that's true."

But state Sen. Susan Tucker, D-Andover, underlined the cooperative tone of state officials.

"It's a vision shared by Republicans and Democrats, the governor, House and Senate," she said. "These are the jobs of the future."

Andover businesses help create Habitat home in one week

By Alison McGonagle

Moriama Velez's two children, son Kayhdel, 7, and daughter Katyanna, 4, saw their mother and other volunteers build a home for them in one week's time last week.

Three Andover builders lent their resources to the cause: Tom Childs of Childs Design and Construction, Dave Bryan of Blackdog Design/Rebuild/Remodel, and Ken LaRose of Andover Equity Builders.

"I am real happy," said Velez, who at the Friday, June 9 dedication ceremony held the first celebration on her new property. "I feel like it is a blessing. My kids are so excited to finally live in their own house, and have their own rooms."

To qualify for the home, Velez, a Lawrence native who has lived predominately in housing projects and is currently a teller at the Lawrence Firefighter's Credit Union, must complete 500 hours of work with Habitat. The single mother is 70 hours shy, but plans to reach 500 hours by the end of July, at the latest.

"I heard about the program from a co-worker two years ago," said Velez. "I then looked it up online and got involved volunteering."

The home was one of 500 that Habitat built that week as part of "Builder Blitz" an annual, national housing initiative. It is a three-bedroom, one-and-a-half-bath home on Melrose Street in Lawrence. The home comes complete with cable, Internet, and telephone hook ups, full appliances, and baseboard heating. All materials were donated by local businesses, as well as all labor.

James Ford, a worker for Childs Design and Construction in Andover, and Mark Boudreau of Salem, N.H., helped build a Habitat for Humanity house on Melrose Street in Lawrence.

Ken LaRose of Andover Equity Builders said he always wanted to be involved with Habitat for Humanity, but he never had the time or opportunity. However, when Tom Childs, a member of the Habitat Board of Directors, contacted him, he knew the time was right.

The story is the same for Dave Bryan at Blackdog.

"Tom called, because we [all three Andover builders] run small businesses, and are very busy," said Bryan. "I was concerned about the workload, because this had never been done before. The sheer logistics were of concern, so between the three of us, it seemed it would be a good distribution of resources."

Childs has been on the board for one year, but the Melrose Street home was his first.

"It's an exhilarating experience," Childs said. "I will surely stay involved. Everyone has been great and I could not have done it myself. From the contacts who supplied the materials, to the help of Dave and Ken, it's been such as success."

Those involved said there were few set backs. According to LaRose, a scheduled roofer backed out on Monday afternoon, but with four full work days ahead, the group scrambled and found another roofer by Tuesday morning.

All three businessmen say they will remain involved with the program.

"I will certainly stay involved in some capacity," said LaRose. "It's a great thing, and I've worked with many caring people."

The Valez family plans to move into the home completely by November, once the house is completely ready, and her service hours helping other Habitat families are fulfilled.

Since its beginnings in 1976, Habitat for Humanity has built more than 200,000 homes, sheltering more than a million people in 3,000 communities worldwide, according to the organization.

In spite of rainy weather, a goodly number of alumnae were in evidence, many of them having come to celebrate with enthusiasm special anniversaries of their graduation. Allan C. Edmands, who recently passed his mental test for the entrance to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, also passed his physical examination Monday, and is now rated as a midshipman at the Academy. He left Andover June 4 for the Naval Base at Hampton Roads, Va., after his six weeks' leave at home, and was sent with his class, at the Naval Preparatory School there, to Annapolis on June 11. While waiting to take his physical examination he was quartered on the USS Reina Mercedes, a Spanish war vessel captured by the Americans during the Spanish War.

Leaving only its rumble seat visible to the crowd which soon gathered, the automobile driven by Wilson J. Both cars were damaged and Mr. Crawford suffered injuries to his left arm.

The new electric pump has been installed at the pumping station at Haggetts Pond and was put into operation Thursday. The old steam pump will be discontinued and repaired for emergency use. ALAN CLARKE

When Clarke began at Morehouse in 2002, things changed again.

"It was a great experience moving from a (white) majority culture at AHS, to the environment of being around 3,000 educated black males," he said. "I had always been one of the only African American students in my classes. Coming to Morehouse allowed me to let my guard down and be myself. I no longer had to answer questions like 'What do African-Americans think about civil rights?'"

But as his college years came to a close, Clarke still had to face questions about his future. He considered trying teaching, consulting, and investment banking. He said his English major provided him with good experiences, including serving as managing editor of the Maroon Tiger newspaper, voted best college paper in Georgia in 2004. Under Clarke's leadership the advertising department raked in $50,000 in revenue. Still, he wasn't sold on sales, marketing or journalism as a career.

"I have always been enamored of the Harvard name," said Clarke. "It was in my back yard growing up, and I never looked at it seriously."

Then came the turning point for Clarke. Ironically, it was at Morehouse's Candle in the Dark award ceremony during his junior year. The ceremony honors prominent members of the African American community and has honored Oprah Winfrey, Bill Cosby and Spike Lee in the past.

Clarke was chosen to present an award to Harvard Law Professor Charles Ogletree.

"Meeting Professor Ogletree made me really want to go to the [Harvard] law school and establish a relationship with him," said Clarke. "I read about all the great things he did, and many of them were things I wanted to accomplish on a social justice level. Harvard gives me the opportunity and the resources to do that."

After his stellar run as an undergraduate, Clarke said he's taking time to recoup. What's he mean by that? Summer on Nantucket? Winter on the slopes? Guess again. He'll be taking summer courses at Dartmouth College's Tuck School of Business, and then heading into the Asia Pacific Leadership Program. Not exactly the relaxing "year off" some might pursue.

"I want to be involved in the expansion of Asian culture," Clarke said. "Technological innovation is shifting to the eastern world. As an African American it is very important to me that African-Americans remain economic and socially viable when that shift occurs. I want to find ways to bridge gaps between cultures."

Don't expect Clarke to forget his roots.

Eventually, he sees himself in corporate law for a short time, before making a move to international work in the public interest field, particularly working with under-served minorities.

He also said he'll come back to Andover someday.

"Some high school buddies and I have always said that we'd open an athletic facility in town," said Clarke. "We always had great experiences on local teams. We want to give athletes a place to train."

If this business is anything like the rest of Clarke's dreams, it seems he'll stop at nothing to see it through to reality.

TOWN TALK

Hearty list-maker in town

A hot date with a big heart?

That's the new requirement for this month's list of Boston magazine's most-wanted singles. The June issue lists five eligible Boston-area bachelors who are considered not only good-looking but do-gooders as well. Philanthropy counts to make this list and an Andover bachelor is on it.

Spiro Pappadopoulos, 31, who runs Evenfall restaurant in Bradford and just bought a house in Andover, says in the magazine that he is looking "for someone who is feminine, but strong, opinionated, smart, and ambitious."

Pappadopoulos supports Massachusetts General Hospital, where his father received a kidney transplant from his mother last September.

20 times a hero

While many people are reluctant to voluntarily subject themselves to a needle, the Red Cross recently saluted an Andover resident who made a conscious effort to go out of his way to donate blood.

At its annual Donor Recognition Dinner, the Red Cross honored Joe Kulig of Andover, among others, for his exceptional efforts in donating blood. Kulig donated blood more than 20 times during the past year year. Blood can be drawn only once every two weeks.

Kulig was among only 10 other people in the state of Massachusetts who donated more than 20 times in a year, and the only person from Andover to do so.

"We have to have the blood sitting on the shelf when (patients) need it, said Dr. Mary O'Nill, American Red Cross spokeswoman. "Patients who need liver transplants, bone marrow transplants, newborn babies, all need blood, and we need to have it sitting on the shelf when they call for it."

Open heart generosity

Jumping rope can pay off big time.

Stephen Moreland, 10, of Andover recently raised more than $1,000 for the Heart Fund, a trademark of the American Heart Association Inc. Moreland attends South Elementary School, where he participated in the Jump Rope for Heart event. He secured sponsors for the event by "going around town to stores not just in Andover, but North Andover and Newburyport as well," said his grandmother, Mary Poole.

"Everybody was so generous. While in a store, a customer gave him $10 right out of her pocket. Stephen is very charming and mature for his age and people recognized that," Poole said.

According to Poole, Moreland was motivated by two factors. First, his grandfather had open heart surgery in 2002 at Beth Israel Hospital. "He raised the money in honor of what his grandfather went through," said Poole.

Second, "Stephen had his eye on the prize, a bike." His drive helped him to raise the most money of any of the children.

A fourth-grader, Moreland plays hockey and lacrosse. Also, he recently played Avery in the South School production of Charlotte's Web.

Senior Center garden gets new pieces in memory of tireless volunteer Pat VanVleet

By Judy Wakefield

BITTERSWEET describes the touching garden ceremony held earlier this week in remembrance of Pat VanVleet, a tireless advocate for Andover's seniors.

Tears flowed freely as those in attendance at Monday afternoon's dedication remembered VanVleet's can-do attitude on scores of senior projects around town and an amazing upbeat energy that she always had even when the chips were down.

VanVleet was active with numerous committees in town, including the Council on Aging, the Cable Television Committee and the Village Garden Club. Each group donated to the Andover Senior Center's outdoor garden in her memory.

VanVleet became involved with these groups after being a devoted caregiver to her late husband and mother-in-law for 10 years. In fact, she was a recipient of a caregiver award from Family Services. VanVleet died in May 2005.

PATRICIA A. VANVLEET

A VanVleet rose bush has joined the blooms in the senior center garden, in memory of the late Pat VanVleet.

"This is very emotional for me as Pat was a dear friend... and I am not embarrassed to cry," said Selectman Mary Lyman, a Senior Center Task Force member with VanVleet. The task force pushed hard to get a new senior center in town. But voters rejected the project at Town Meeting in April 2005.

"I remember when our signs (in support of the center) were late and got delivered late on a Friday night. Who do you call? I called Pat and she said, 'Give me half,' and she put them up that night," said Lyman. "That was Pat."

"We didn't get a senior center – yet," added task force member Don Robb. "But Pat was one who saw early on there was a need. It's just sad she won't see it."

With two of VanVleet's daughters and two granddaughters in attendance, the ceremony noted the addition to the blooming senior center garden of a new rose bush, bench and arbor in honor of VanVleet. The garden is tucked in a corner of the fields used by baseball and football programs, and just steps from the senior center's front door.

"She was a longtime garden club member and supported the idea when we offered the garden to the senior center," said Nan James of the Village Garden Club, who also softened the mood of the crowd when she said her friend got things done but was also "full of beans."

The club donated a rose bush and offered a story behind finding the appropriate rose. The garden club's trip to the New York Botanical Gardens included a viewing of a football-field-sized rose garden. VanVleet was there and a pretty pink rose stood out as it was called the VanVleet rose. She said it was definitely connected to her family.

The rose bush was planted at the dedication ceremony and VanVleet's family members said it was a perfect way to remember her.

OBITUARIES

Craig Thorn IV

Phillips Academy English teacher

Craig Thorn IV, 47, of Andover, died Monday, June 12 at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston after a two-an-a-half year battle against cancer.

Craig Thorn IV

A member of the English Department at Phillips Academy for 26 years, he has shaped countless students' lives, inspired his colleagues, stamped his character on the Academy with his boundless creative energy and nurtured a loving family.

He was born Dec. 14, 1958 in Hudson, N.Y., a place and region of which he was proud, and to which he was loyal. Whatever trajectories his rich life would trace, his teaching was always informed and tempered by the vivid curiosities and fertile friendships of the Upstate New York town life. Having graduated from Hudson High School in 1976, he entered Dartmouth College, where his gift for the language, his indefatigable creativity and magnetic personality found fruition. He was an avid skier, unrelenting tennis player and deft left-handed pool shooter, a skill he honed as a member of Alpha Theta fraternity.

Among his most cherished college experiences was a personal and professional friendship with Ted Geisel. With Dr. Seuss his mentor, he was well on his way to a variegated career as teacher, writer, house counsellor, coach, professional editor and music critic, radio broadcasting personality, founder of a score of campus literary magazines, and an ideal institutional propellant for a school about to enter a new millennium.

Hired as a teaching fellow in 1980, he joined the faculty as instructor in English after earning a master's degree in English from Brown in 1982. He mastered the works of the satirists Swift and Twain, specialized in the Romantic Poets and Shakespeare, and after a sabbatical to Santa Fe, N.M., in 1991-92, made Native American, Central and South American literature his specialty.

"His classroom was a hothouse of intellect, a haven of hip and a profound reservoir of teacherly love," his colleagues said. He served a term as English Department chairman, a time of exciting growth and experimental flowering, and helped shape policy and give direction to the school in its non-academic functions.

It was as a house counselor (Eaton Cottage, Bishop Hall and Thompson House) where he struck his most enduring ties with his students, as general manager of WPAA where he rose to cult status, not just on campus, but at the farthest reaches of the station's signal in far-flung New England. His encyclopedic knowledge of and voracious appetite for all kinds of music kept the station at the vanguard of a true world movement.

In his spare time, Mr. Thorn ran two educational publishing houses, helping many of his colleagues publish professional essays about teaching.

His work was his fun, his family's life his purpose. He wove his family both into the school's fabric and the town's, where he was an avid and generous supporter of a host of youth activities and civic groups.

Members of his family include his wife, Andrea, son, Alex, and daughter, Kelsey, all of Andover; his father, Craig Thorn III, and his mother, Edwinna, of Hudson; his brother, Doug, and wife Denise and three children of Loudonville, N.Y.; sister, Stacy, and her two children of Norcross, Ga., and his father-in-law, Laszlo Papp of New Canaan, Conn.

Memorial services will be announced.

Rev. Donald R. Woodward

Was assistant minister at Christ Church

The Rev. Canon Donald R. Woodward, 93, an Episcopal priest who served the church for more than 60 years, died Friday, June 9, at his residence at Riverwoods, Exeter, N.H.

His years of services included Christ Church in Andover and other churches in Massachusetts, Vermont, Kansas, and New York. He was dean of the Episcopal Cathedral in Kansas City, Kansas and vicar of Trinity Church, Wall Street, New York.

Rev. Woodward was born and raised in Taunton, the son of Leroy Woodward and Ruth Lillian (Robertson), and graduated from Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine.

Upon completing studies at the General Theological Seminary in New York City, Rev. Woodward, in 1940, was called to the Chapel of the Intercession in New York City, as curate.

Three years later, he moved to Lynn, to serve as Rector of the Church of the Incarnation. It was while in Lynn, that he met Madeleine (Proctor), of Newton, who worked at the YMCA in Boston. They were married at the Church of the Advent in Boston, in 1947.

Rev. Woodward, with his wife and two young children, moved to Vermont, where he served as rector of St. Peter's Church in Bennington and rector of St. Paul's Church in Burlington.

In 1957, Rev. Woodward moved with his young family of four children to Kansas City where he was dean of Grace and Holy Trinity Cathedral for more than 10 years. He was called back to New York City, as vicar of Trinity Church, but before departing Kansas City he was made a permanent honorary Canon of the Cathedral.

In New York, Rev. Woodward later served as rector of Church of the Holy Communion, where he helped oversee the merger with St. George's Church and Calvary Church to form one congregation.

In his ministry, Rev. Woodward was involved in the communities where he served, such as membership in the Rotary Club and programs on behalf of alcoholism prevention and treatment. He also gave priority to pastoral ministry, serving members of his congregation.

At Trinity Church, located at the head of Wall Street, he helped start a Wall Street Lawyers Ministry, and a weekday, noontime ministry, opening up the church for lunchtime concerts and setting up painting stations outside the church in the summer for people to relax and paint.

He supported civil rights causes in Kansas City, and, in New York, led an antiwar procession, from Trinity Church, down Wall Street, during the Vietnam War.

Rev. and Mrs. Woodward moved to Newburyport in retirement, where Rev. Woodward remained involved with the church, serving as temporary, interim minister at St. James the Less in Scarsdale, N.Y.; St. Paul's Church in Newburyport; Trinity Church in Melrose; Christ Church in Portsmouth, N.H.; St. David's in Radnor, Pa.; and Church of the Advent in Boston.

He was also an interim minister at Christ Church in Andover, later working for several years part time as assistant minister.

Rev. Woodward was an avid reader, theater-goer, and lover of opera and Boston Symphony concerts. He loved gardening, and taking his family on vacations each summer. He took advantage of retirement, in between interim ministry jobs, to take several trips with Mrs. Woodward to England, France, Italy and other countries in Europe.

Rev. and Mrs. Woodward lived for the past 12 years at Riverwoods in Exeter, an assisted-living residence for seniors, where they made many friends and became active in several committees.

In addition to his wife, members of his family include a sister, Marjorie Richmond of Norton; children, Gretchen Park of Kensington, Md., Michael Woodward of Hampton Falls, N.H.; Merideth Colon of Franklin Square, N.Y., and Chris Woodward of Chelmsford; nine grandchildren; and one great-granddaughter.

AHS ROUNDUP

Down – and out!

4 teams in MIAA races depart, call it a season

By Rick Harrison

IT TURNED OUT TO BE A BLEAK WEEK for Andover High teams in the MIAA Division 1 North Tournament. Not in terms of performance but in terms of results.

And it wasn't just the constant rain that created the misery.

All four remaining AHS qualifiers were bounced from the single-elimination competition; the last to exit the Golden Warriors' baseball crew, which dropped a wild 11-8 decision to upstart Peabody in a thrice-postponed game (downpours and wet fields).

Three more AHS teams had their tournament runs halted just hours apart, each member of the trio also several wins short of their ultimate goal.

• For the second time this season, the Lady Warriors' girls tennis team gave then-undefeated top seed Newton South all it could handle, but once again the locals were nipped, 3-2, in the Division 1 North Tournament semifinals.

• Boys tennis also advanced to the North semifinals before being ousted by a Dual County League team, Acton-Boxboro chalking up a 4-1 victory at the Willows Racquet Club indoor courts in North Andover.

• Boys lacrosse made it to the North quarterfinals before dropping a 15-10 decision to Malden Catholic in their twice-postponed game, finally played on the neutral Reading High turf.

BASEBALL

Not an excuse. Just a statement of fact.

Thanks to Mother Nature – and an unprecedented amount of rain and postponed games – this spring's MIAA Tournaments in every outdoor sport lacked continuity.

The stutter-step scheduling made it impossible for teams to get any momentum going or feel the full impact of the tourney atmosphere.

The only constants were the rain – and the fact every team was in the same boat – literally.

Whether the powerhouse Andover High varsity baseball squad fell victim to the circumstances will never be known, but the locals were stunned by visiting Peabody, 11-8, in the Division 1 North Tournament quarterfinals as several hundred spectators looked on at Peter Aumais Park.

So, instead of the North title game everyone had anticipated – Andover versus St. John's Prep – the Golden Warriors are left to ponder what might have been.

No. 2 seed AHS finished an outstanding season 19-3 overall, which included an earlier 1-0 first round triumph over Lowell, and the loss to the Tanners snapped a six-game win streak.

No. 7 seed Peabody (17-5), which ousted Cambridge Rindge & Latin, 14-5, in its first-rounder, went no farther as 32 hours later Malden Catholic posted a 6-3 semifinal win at Lowell's LeLacheur Park to earn that coveted berth opposite SJP.

Coach Ken Maglio's crew outscored its 22 opponents this spring by a wide 175-60 margin.

Andover pitchers registered six shutouts, held three teams to one run and four others to two runs.

Peabody was the first team to score more than seven runs against the Golden Warriors, who allowed more than three only six times in 22 games.

Maglio now sports an overall 209-106 won-lost record.

His teams have won or shared seven Merrimack Valley Conference titles and three Division 1 North crowns over the years.

Last spring the Golden Warriors tore through Boston Latin (8-4), Newton North (11-2), Reading (2-0) and St. John's Prep (13-5) on the way to the North title, falling two wins shy of the program's third State Division 1 crown after dropping a 4-2 decision to Walpole in the state semifinals.

Senior standouts

Andover says goodbye to seven seniors, including four-year starter Paul Malaguti and three-year starters Myke Fortier, Andrew Hennessy and Greg Carroll.

Kyle Morander, Tom White and Austin Gilbert have also donned the Blue and Gold for the final time.

Final stats

The Golden Warriors finished with a .352 team batting average and 1.88 earned run average.

At the plate, Paul Malaguti was the leading hitter among the regulars with a lofty .430 average (34-for-79) while Dan Godefroi was close behind at .419.

Andrew Hennessy batted .393, Kevin Calabro .371, Greg Carroll .352, Kyle Morander .345, P.J. Farnham .338 and Mike Pierce .333.

In limited plate appearances Tom White hit 1.000, going 2-for-2, and Myke Fortier .500 on 1-for-2.

Malaguti was tops in hits with 34, Godefroi had 31, Farnham 26, Carroll 25, Hennessy 24 and Calabro 23.

Godefroi scored 24 runs, Farnham 22, Hennessy 21 and Malaguti 20.

Carroll collected 26 RBI, Malaguti 25 in the No. 2 hole, Hennessy 21, Godefroi 19, Calabro 17 and leadoff hitter Farnham 15.

Farnham and Calabro both walked 15 times, Godefroi 13, Malaguti and Morander 12 each and Hennessy 10.

Farnham had 27 of the team's 64 stolen bases and Godefroi was next with nine.

In the power department, solo homers were smacked by Carroll, Farnham, Malaguti, Morander and Pierce.

Malaguti laced four triples while Carroll, Godefroi and Pierce added two each as the team finished with 13.

Malaguti was tops in doubles with seven of the team's 34. Farnham and Godefroi contributed five each, Carroll and Doug Hawkins four apiece, Calabro three and Hennessy three.

Malaguti had the highest slugging percentage (.542), followed by Pierce (.455), Godefroi (.444) and Carroll (.429).

The on-base percentage leader was Malaguti at .531, closely followed by Godefroi at .522, Calabro .519, Hennessy .519, Farnham .468 and Carroll .452.

On the mound, Massachusetts State Gatorade Player of the Year Godefroi finished 8-0 with a 0.40 ERA. In 52⅓ innings he allowed just 25 hits and three earned runs while striking out 52 and walking only eight.

Myke Fortier was 6-2 with a 2.59 ERA. In 48⅔ innings he yielded 41 hits and 18 earned runs while also fanning 52 and walking 19.

Kevin Calabro was 3-0 with one save and a 2.51 ERA. In 22⅓ innings he surrendered 22 hits and eight earned runs, whiffing 22 and walking 10.

Tim Hoffman went 0-1 with four saves and a 3.18 ERA, Tom White was 1-0, 3.76 and Sam Clark 1-0, 0.00.

In 157 innings, the AHS staff allowed 118 hits and 42 earned runs while striking out 146 batters and issuing 47 walks.

Defensively, shortstop Malaguti finished with 53 assists, 24 putouts while second baseman Hennessy added 48 assists, 45 putouts.

Division 1 North Tournament
QUARTERFINAL
Peabody 11
Andover 8

The locals stranded numerous runners in the early innings (eight for the game), and fell behind the free-swinging, hard-hitting Tanners 8-2 in the fifth.

A six-run rally in the bottom of the seventh, highlighted by two-run doubles from Greg Carroll and Kevin Calabro, made it interesting while trimming the deficit to 10-8.

Suddenly it appeared as though the potent MVC champion Golden Warriors, who have piled up 54 victories the past three years, were on the verge of a major comeback win.

Instead, Peabody took the solid blow to the chin and climbed off the ropes impressively, holding AHS scoreless in the final two frames while calming its anxieties by adding an insurance run to seal the victory.

Andover's offense produced 15 of the game's 33 hits, including three each by senior shortstop Paul Malaguti and Dan Godefroi, as Malaguti wrapped up his fine AHS career in style and finished with 114 basehits.

P.J. Farnham, Andrew Hennessy and Greg Carroll laced two safeties each, while Kevin Calabro, Doug Hawkins and Ken Masse added one apiece.

Carroll, Malaguti and Calabro each drove in a pair of runs while Farnham and Hennessy both crossed the plate twice.

Defensively, Malaguti had another extremely busy day at shortstop as the Wheaton College-bound standout fittingly capped his career with five assists and four putouts.

In the Peabody ninth, his last ever in the field for AHS, Malaguti scooped and threw out the first batter before ending the inning by starting a 6-3 double play.

Peabody, which scored in six of the nine innings including five two-run rallies, pounded out 18 hits against three Andover pitchers (Myke Fortier, Tim Hoffman, Kevin Calabro).

Winning pitcher Mike Jackson and Kyle Multner led the assault with three safeties and three RBI each, Multner producing a near-cycle single, double and triple.

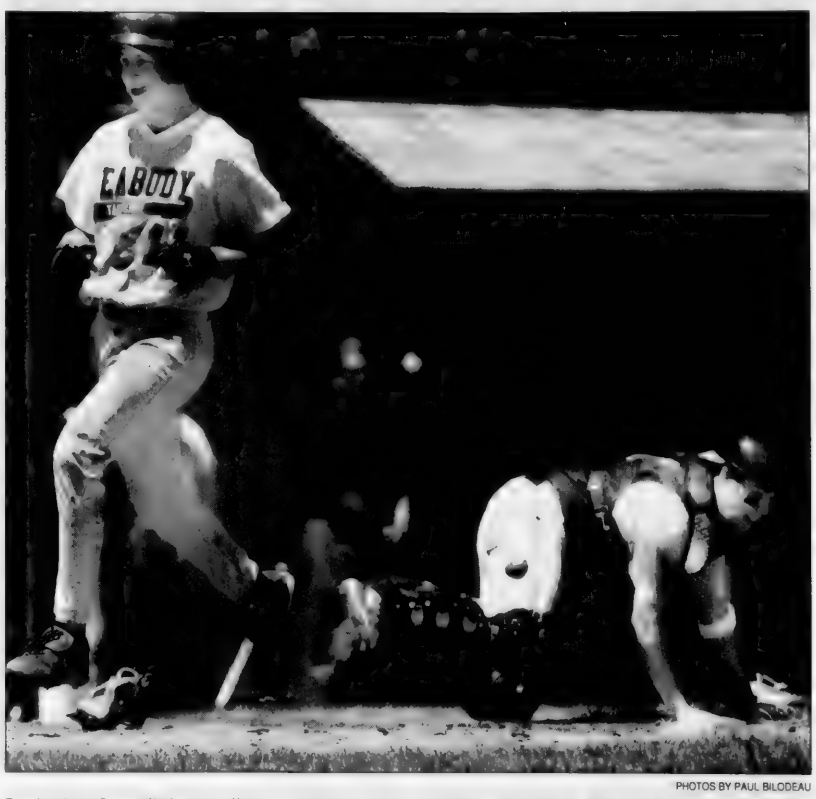

Matt Sucharewicz also had three hits, scored twice and drove in a run, while Jamie Wentworth was one of four others with two hits and he also drove home a pair of runs.

In the AHS first, Malaguti was hit by a pitch and Godefroi singled to right with one out – but both were left stranded.

Hennessy led off the second with a single to center, moved to third on an infield out and wild pitch before scoring the first Andover run on Ken Masse's infield hit. Masse was then thrown out stealing.

The locals scored only once in the third, even though the inning opened with singles by Farnham and Malaguti and a double by Godefroi. A tapper to the mound, strikeout and groundout to second prevented further damage.

Carroll and Hawkins opened the fourth with a single to left and infield hit, respectively, but a popout to third and a strikeout ended this bid.

Malaguti led the fifth with an infield hit and Godefroi ripped a single to right, but a fielder's choice grounder, unsuccessful steal and strikeout thwarted yet another AHS rally.

A double play killed the sixth but, in the seventh, 10 batters paraded to the plate and six scored.

In addition to the two-run, two-baggers by Carroll and Calabro, walks to Farnham and pinch-hitter Sam Clark, a double by Malaguti and an RBI single by Hennessy were featured.

The locals got one runner aboard in both the eighth and ninth, Farnham on a leadoff infield hit and Carroll on a two-out walk respectively, but for one of the few times this season there was no big hit to be found.

GIRLS TENNIS

For the third straight year the Andover High girls tennis team – seeded No. 4 in a 20-school field – lost a heartbreaking 3-2 decision to a Dual County League powerhouse in the Division 1 North Tournament semifinals.

For the past two years, it was Concord-Carlisle – which went on to win the state title in both 2004 and 2005 – doing the deed.

This spring, it was Newton South, which finished 21-1 after losing a 3-2 decision to DCL rival Westford Academy in the North final at the Winchester Indoor Tennis Club.

The Lady Warriors had hoped to avenge their only loss as DCL champ Newton South also won a classic 3-2 match on April 27.

Earlier in the tourney the Lady Warriors, who finished 18-2 overall, ousted Acton-Boxboro and Lowell with a pair of 5-0 sweeps.

The loss to Newton South snapped a 13-match win streak.

AHS was 13-0 this spring as Merrimack Valley Conference champ for an unprecedented 17th straight year.

The locals have stretched their conference win streak through 263 consecutive matches dating back to a 3-2 loss to Lowell on May 21, 1990. AHS is also 337-1 in its last 338 league matches.

"We accomplished at least part of our goal," said AHS coach Dave Hughes. "We wanted to win it all – but we also wanted a second shot at Newton South in the tourney.

"We played evenly with every top team (in the state) we faced – and were able to do that because of our depth.

"We didn't have a dynamo. No unbeatable player. But we did have balance and strength throughout the lineup," said Hughes.

"We lose seven seniors – including two starters – from a 20-player roster. But all five of our juniors were starters (Caroline Koch, Rikki Sartor, JooHee Yoon, Kristina Black, Heather Arvidson). I expect to be just as deep next year."

Seven seniors

The Lady Warriors graduate those seven seniors including regular starters Hannah Zarkar and Meredith Levenson.

They are joined by captains Casey Mitrano and Liz McPartland, Shannon Fitzgerald, Emma Haak and Patty Collins.

Zarkar is headed to the University of California-Berkeley in the fall, Levenson to Hobart College, Mitrano to Boston University, McPartland to Trinity College, Haak to Northwestern and Collins to UConn.

Fitzgerald is still weighing her options and is undecided about what she'll be doing in the fall.

Levenson and McPartland are the most likely of the group to try collegiate tennis.

"Several of the girls are four-year players and we're going to miss them all," said coach Hughes.

All-Conference

Five AHS players were named to the 2006 All-Conference squad.

Leading the way are all three singles players Hannah Zarkar, Caroline Koch and Hannah Hoerner.

They are joined by the doubles tandem of Rikki Sartor and JooHee Yoon.

Second doubles Meredith Levenson and Heather Arvidson were named Merrimack Valley Conference All-Stars.

Dave Hughes is the MVC Division 1 Coach of the Year.

MVC girls Players of the Year are juniors Amanda Carroll of Central Catholic (Division 1) and Julia Brodowski of Billerica.

State Individual Championships

The North Sectional Tournament champion girls doubles team of juniors Rikki Sartor and Kristina Black of Andover High will compete in the four-team State Tournament finals this Saturday at Clark University in Worcester.

The state finals in Worcester bring together the four sectional champs from the North, South, Central and Western parts of the commonwealth to battle it out.

Sartor and Black, 5-0 in Sectional play, are just two wins away from becoming the first AHS players ever to capture state individual titles.

Other teams in the state finals doubles field include Central Mass. champs Alexa Trapasso and Emily Marr of Notre Dame Academy-Fitchburg, South titlists Lauren Donnelly and Kortney Kelley of Barnstable High and Western winners Christina Nilsson and Melody Chou of Longmeadow High.

Sartor and Black will face Barnstable's Donnelly and Kelley in the semifinals at 10:30 a.m.

The two semifinal winners will then meet for the State title Saturday afternoon.

"The match lived up to the hype," said coach Hughes. "We knew going in we'd either win 3-2 or lose 2-3. The only difference between these two teams was a few key shots in crucial situations."

The Lady Warriors earned a pair of straight-set wins at third singles and second doubles, but it wasn't quite enough as Newton South nipped the locals at the Longfellow Tennis Club courts in Wayland.

Sophomore Hannah Hoerner earned the AHS victory in singles, defeating Newton's Jillian Schwartz 6-3, 6-2.

The doubles triumph went to Meredith Levenson and Heather Arvidson in equally-convincing 6-2, 6-3 fashion over Stacey Eisenberg and Marissa Mamon.

Leading the way for Newton South was undefeated freshman Lauren Hollander at first singles, with a 6-1, 6-4 win over Hannah Zarkar.

Hollander, the 5'1" powerhouse who is also the reigning North Sectional champion and will play for the State individual singles title this Saturday at Clark University, is 28-0 this spring and has not lost a set (56 straight).

The Lions' Katey Young also defeated Caroline Koch 6-3, 6-2 at second singles.

In first doubles, South's Elana Polivy and Sari Fromson came from behind to topple North Sectional champs Rikki Sartor and Kristina Black 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

It was the first loss for Sartor and Black as a doubles team.

In the first match against Newton, Sartor played with JooHee Yoon and they swept past Polivy and Fromson 6-3, 6-4.

"The loss was easier to take because our girls came out fighting from the start and went the distance," said coach Hughes. "They left it all on the court – both emotionally and physically. We couldn't have asked for more."

In the subsequent 3-2 loss to surprising 15th-seed Westford (16-7), Newton South had its 21-match win streak snapped.

Hollander (6-2, 6-2) and Young (6-0, 6-0) chalked up lopsided straight-set victories at first and second singles, but Westford captured third singles and second doubles in straight sets.

The match came down to first doubles, where the Grey Ghosts' Theresa Malone and Lily Beckeman rallied for a 0-6, 6-3, 7-5 victory to clinch the North title. The Westford pair erased a 4-5 deficit in the third set by winning three straight games to close it out.

Westford was then beaten 4-1 by undefeated South champ Needham (21-0) in the State semifinals, setting up a battle between Needham and Central/Western Mass. champ Longmeadow for the Division 1 title.

That match was played yesterday after Townsman presstime.

BOYS TENNIS

The Andover High boys tennis team, three-time reigning Merrimack Valley Conference champs, finished the season at 17-2 overall following the 4-1 Division 1 North semifinal loss to Acton-Boxboro.

The setback followed a pair of earlier tourney victories over Beverly (5-0) and Chelmsford (4-1).

No. 7 seed A-B then faltered in the North final, losing for the third time this spring to undefeated (20-0) top seed and Dual County League champion Concord-Carlisle, 4-1.

Andover captured the Merrimack Valley Conference title this spring, the 18th in coach Mike Wartman's 22 years at the helm.

The Golden Warriors will enter the 2007 season having won 42 straight conference matches since a 3-2 loss to Chelmsford on May 15, 2003.

"The improvement in the team as a whole – from the beginning of the season to the end – was marked," said coach Wartman. "We graduated six seniors – five of whom played regularly this season – and all will be hard to replace."

The senior six are Capt. Jeremy Hogan, who will attend Skidmore College next fall, Eric Krupnik (UMass Amherst), Julian Vastl (Boston College), Seth Johnson (Colby), Seth Davidovits (Columbia) and Capt. Jim Conway. Hogan intends to play collegiate tennis.

"They're all very smart kids with many academic interests," said Wartman.

All-Conference

Dave Adams was voted the Merrimack Valley Conference Player of the Year.

Selected All-Conference in singles were Jeremy Hogan and Eric Krupnik.

In doubles, two of the four teams are from Andover with both Seth Davidovits/Julian Vastl and Steve Ochs/Seth Johnson chosen.

The Golden Warriors, whose only other loss this season was 4-1 to St. John's Prep of Danvers, had their hands full.

Although the locals were competitive, the only AHS win came from second singles Jeremy Hogan while sophomore first singles Dave Adams took his match to three sets.

Adams lost the first set to the Colonials' Surainder Askuraj, 0-6, before bouncing back to take the second, 7-5.

Because of time constraints – and because A-B had already clinched the team victory, the third set was reduced to a tiebreaker and Askuraj came from behind for an 8-6 victory.

"Dave got off to a rough start in the first set, having trouble getting his rhythm and feeling comfortable," said Wartman. "But then he broke serve in the second set, eliminated the unforced errors and began serving much better himself.

"Dave discovered he could come up to net successfully on the volley against their kid. He hit his overhead shots well and it turned into a very competitive two-hour match."

Adams was ahead 6-5 in the third set – but with match point in sight he was unable to close it out as Askuraj won the last three points to clinch the set and match, 8-6.

MAXIMUM LIGHT CONTROL

By going with the bottom-up option on your new window shades, you can cover just the bottom of the window while leaving the top portion open to allow natural light to enter the room. This option works well in bedrooms, bathrooms and dining rooms, where privacy is a primary consideration. Some window coverings open either way, and others operate from the top or the bottom only. Virtually every window shade, whether it is cellular or pleated in sheer or opaque fabrics or natural weave, comes with the bottom-up option. Even soft-fold Roman shades can operate as bottom-up shades. Shades that open both ways come with two sets of cords instead of one.

Bottom-up window shades are just one of the many treatments that may be exactly what you've been looking for for that hard to decorate window. AHS ROUNDUP

■ BOYS TENNIS

The loss was the first of the spring for Adams in team-match competition.

Hogan was impressive in notching Andover's lone point in a 6-1, 6-3 second singles sweep of A-B's Adam Steger.

"I thought Jeremy played his best match of the season," said Wartman. "He was very steady and had very few unforced errors. He served well and never let his opponent get into the match."

Third singles Eric Krupnik ran into a buzzsaw and was overpowered by the Colonials' Eric Feibleman 6-0, 6-0.

"Krupnik came up against the best opponent he's faced all season," said Wartman. "There were some extended points – but he (Feibleman) had too much power and control. Eric never got untracked."

In doubles, AHS top tandem Julian Vastl and Seth Davidovits faced one of the four best duos in the state and A-B's Pat Burns and Ryan Lemos showed why in a 6-1, 7-5 triumph.

"The Acton kids are North Sectional champions," noted Wartman. "In the first set our guys couldn't handle their serve. "But Julian and Seth played much more relaxed in the second set and mounted a challenge.

"We won a lot of points at net. There were many long rallies, deuce games and it came down to one service break making the difference."

Burns and Lemos also scored the only Acton-Boxboro point in the 4-1 North final loss to Concord-Carlisle.

The visitors' Dan Crowley and Charlie Norrington completed a sweep of the doubles with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Andover's Seth Johnson and Steve Ochs.

"In second doubles, Seth and Steve were up against two strong lefties," said Wartman. "Even though the second set ended 6-1, there were a lot of close games. Their guys won the big points and it was hard to crack their momentum."

BOYS LACROSSE

The Andover High varsity boys lacrosse juggernaut reached the end of the tournament road when it dropped the 15-10 Division 1 East Tournament quarterfinal round decision to visiting Malden Catholic.

The setback came on the heels of a 13-9 first-round win over Barnstable and the locals' best-ever regular season.

Coach Wayne Puglisi's crew was 18-2 overall, 17-1 during the regular season and 8-0 as Merrimack Valley Conference champion.

They were seeded No. 3 in a mammoth field of 27 qualifiers in the single-elimination 2006 MIAA East Division 1 Tournament.

No. 2 seed and East semifinalist Xaverian (16-3) handed Andover its only other loss of the spring, 11-10 on May 2.

Malden Catholic was ousted in the next round of the tourney, dropping a 14-9 decision to Xaverian in the semifinals.

Andover reached double figures in 19 of 20 games and outscored the opposition, 243-121.

Coach Puglisi's overall record in seven seasons – as the only head coach in the history of the AHS boys program, is now 88-48.

Dirty dozen

The locals are hard hit by graduation – losing 12 seniors including the heart of the offense and defense.

Sure to be missed next year are captains Buddy Farnham, Andy Gatti and Mike Lamagna, along with A.J. Drivas, Mike Ahern, Max and Sam Ball, Phil Kim, Mike Shea, Mike Stewart, Rich Ford and Brian Walsh.

Division 1 East Tournament
QUARTERFINAL
Malden Catholic 15

Surprising No. 11 seed Malden Catholic (13-6) remained on a roll, clipping AHS after the Lancers previously upset St. John's Prep of Danvers, 11-10 in overtime, and ousted Weymouth, 12-5, in the prelim round.

Andover started slowly and MC, which never trailed, jumped ahead 8-3 at the half and traded goals with the locals in the final two quarters.

Andover did chip away and inch back within a pair, 12-10, late in the game before Malden Catholic impressively withstood the charge and countered with the final three in the last five minutes to seal the victory.

Captains Buddy Farnham and Mike Lamagna both wrapped up their illustrious AHS careers as the top two scorers in school history, netting three goals each.

A.J. Drivas contributed two, while sophomore midfielders Peter Hanson and Matt Rayner notched one apiece.

Drivas and Lamagna also passed out assists with the latter chalking up his 90th point of the season.

Derek Earp and Tim Walsh pocketed four goals each for upstart MC, while Wayne Grout pumped in a pair.

Lancers' goalie Patrick Healey played a huge part in the victory with 21 saves.

Malden Catholic used an effective zone defense, paying special attention to Farnham and Lamagna, and the winners also played a physical, ball-control style that proved effective.

TRACK & FIELD

Freshman half-miler Colleen Shannon capped a superb maiden season for the Andover High girls track and field team by placing ninth in the 800-meter run at the New England Championship Meet held last weekend at Willow Brook Park in New Britain, Conn.

The talented ninth-grade middle-distance standout finished in 2:20.64, which was about eight seconds behind winner Siobhan Breagy of North Kingston, R.I. (2:12.85).

Shannon's performance added to her fifth at the rain-delayed All-State Championship Meet (2:20.12) and her winning effort at the Division 1 East Meet in a personal-best 2:20.07.

In the three biggest meets of her fledgling career, the consistent Shannon ran three nearly-identical times that were just over a half-second apart.

FOR THE KID IN YOU

Newspapers In Education

Pandas munch in the mists of China

High in the rainy mountains of southwest China the Kid found one of the world's rarest mammals, the giant panda.

About 1,500 pandas live in the wild. Another 180 live in captivity, most in China's panda research reserves. China has loaned 11 pandas to zoos in the United States.

In China the panda is called "Xiongmao" which means Giant Cat Bear. Its scientific name is Ailuropoda Melanoluca.

Everyone recognizes the cute black and white pandas. Perhaps you own a stuffed panda bear.

The panda's white fur is accented with black eye patches, ears, legs, feet, chest, and shoulders. The thick, coarse fur feels oily to the touch. The oil forms a coating to protect pandas from the cool and damp climate where they live.

A newborn panda is the size of a chipmunk, about 3 to 4.5 ounces. Over the next five years, a panda grows quickly to over 200 pounds. An adult panda is about six feet long.

Pandas eat bamboo — a lot of bamboo. They munch 12 to 16 hours a day, eating 22 to 40 pounds of mature bamboo or 84 pounds of fresh bamboo shoots and leaves each day.

The pandas' molars are very broad and flat, which helps them crush the bamboo. They eat quickly and only digest about a fifth of what they eat.

They hold the stems with their front paws, which have enlarged wrist bones that act as thumbs.

Pandas eat about 15 different varieties of bamboo. Bamboo goes through periodic die-offs, so pandas must have more than one variety nearby or they will starve.

Little cutie! Su Lin was born at the San Diego Zoo on Aug. 2, 2005. Her name means "a little bit of something very cute."

Pandas once moved from one mountaintop to another to find food. But more and more people live in the valleys. Pandas are shy and don't like to mix with people.

As the habitat gets smaller, pandas have been forced higher up the mountains.

In 1984 the panda joined the list of endangered species. Those who poach pandas can receive a life sentence in China. The government has set aside about half the remaining panda habitat in panda reserves.

In April, a panda born and raised in captivity returned to the wild. Chinese scientists gave four-year-old Xiang Xiang survival training to teach him how to live on his own.

With research, habitat preservation and protection from hunters, wild pandas should continue to munch in the mist.

Fast times in Florida for 3 AHS swimmers

Three Andover High girls swimmers, who have helped the Lady Warriors to one or more of their seven straight Massachusetts state championships, competed at the Junior National Championships held in Orlando, Fla.

This meet is one of the fastest and most prestigious in the country, organizers said, showcasing the top 18-and-under swimmers in the nation.

Distance events (1000 and 1650 yards) are timed finals (one race), while all other events are prelims and finals.

The top 24 times from the morning trials make it back to the finals, the first eight finishers in the prelims competing for national titles in the 'A' Division, 9 through 16 in the consolations and 17 through 24 in the bonus final.

This meet was held in a 25-yard short course pool.

Candice Peak, 17, an AHS senior and multi-time individual and relay team state champ for Andover, recorded five personal-best times, made the finals in five events and swam under the NCAA Championship 'B' consideration time in three events.

She was 5th in the 200 backstroke, clocking 2:00.3 in the finals and 1:59.6 in the prelims. Both times are under the World Championship Trials/Senior National cut time, while the prelim time was just off the collegiate NCAA 'A' automatic qualifying time cut.

Peak was also 5th in the 100 back (56.3 final, 56.7 prelim), with both times under the US Open cut. Her finals time was just 0.2 off the World Championship Trial and NCAA 'B' qualifying time.

She was 13th in the 50 backstroke, which is not a US or NCAA event, with a best time of 27.07 in the finals.

Candice was the bonus final winner, 17th overall, in the 400 individual medley with a 4:23.0 in the finals and 4:27.6 in the prelims. Both times are under the US Open cut, while the 4:23.0 is an NCAA 'B' qualifier and less than 1.5 seconds off the World Championship Trial standard.

Peak also won the bonus final in the 200 individual medley with a 17th place finish, clocking 2:03.2 in the finals after a 2:06.0 in the prelims.

Her 2:03.2 ended up as the 7th fastest time at the meet, coming in under the US Open cut and making the NCAA 'B' cut. It was 0.4 seconds off the World Championship Trial time.

Wisconsin bound

Peak has signed an NCAA National Letter of Intent to the University of Wisconsin, whose women's swim team is ranked 9th in the country, and she will officially sign with the Badgers soon.

She chose Wisconsin over three other Top 25 squads: Indiana, Notre Dame and Virginia.

Wisconsin has consistently ranked in the Top 10 and produced Carly Piper, a 2004 Olympic Gold Medalist and World record-holder in the 800 freestyle relay.

Wisconsin head coach Eric Hansen has been named head coach for the USA team, which will compete at the Short Course World Championships in China next month.

Korsberg and Cody

Kristi Korsberg, 15, another AHS state champion as a sophomore, reached the finals in two events with a pair of US Open cut times.

She won the bonus final in the 200 butterfly, touching 17th with a 2:04.65 after a 2:04.72 in the prelims. It was the first US Open cut time for Korsberg.

She was also 23rd in the 400 individual medley with a 4:27.73 performance in the finals and 4:26.54 in the prelims.

Kristi also broke the coveted 5-minute barrier in the 500 free for the first time, posting a 4:59.22 in the prelims to place 31st.

Ellen Cody, 16, an AHS sophomore registered two personal-best distance freestyle times with a 10:14.82 on the way to 37th place in the 1000 free and 5:02.14 for 64th in the 500 free.

Cody showed her toughness by competing even though she had been sick with a fever and out of the training waters for several days prior to the meet.

All three girls compete for head coach Mike Spring's Magnus Aquatic Group based in Andover.

They will return to the pool this spring for the long course (50 meter) season and are expected to participate in several USA Grand Prix events. Peak will also head to the 2007 World Championship Trials in Irvine, Calif. in August.

She currently has World qualifying times in the 100 and 200 meter backstrokes, and hopes to add cut times in the individual medleys to her list.

Peak, whose older sister Liz (Peak) Logue was also a top swimmer at Andover High, is ultimately shooting for the 2008 Olympic Trials.

Bessie Goldsmith's work helps crack 'cocoanut' question

Bill Dalton

"Town Talk" in the Andover Townsman mentioned the tradition of coconuts at Memorial Day in Andover. The owner of the Andover Spa on Elm Street only sold 62 coconuts this year with townies being the customers. Phid Dantos said that in 1969, when he owned Pete's, as the Andover Spa was called for decades, he sold 1600 coconuts before noon. The tradition is dying but not dead.

When I was a kid, on Decoration Day (as Memorial Day was usually called then) coconuts were ubiquitous down town, with no self-respecting Andover child being without one. We carried them as badges of honor. Decoration Day originated in 1866 and the word "decoration" comes from "decorating" graves, usually with flowers. For many years, the names Decoration Day and Memorial Day were used interchangeably, but it was mostly called "Decoration Day" in our part of the country. In 1967, federal law officially designated it as "Memorial Day." In 1971, the day was declared a national holiday, and was moved from May 30 to the last Monday of May to create a three-day weekend. Flags are flown at half mast from dawn until noon.

Bessie Punchard Goldsmith addressed the coconut/Decoration Day custom twice: first on May 28, 1920, in her regular Townsman column and again in her 1964 book Townswoman's Andover. Miss Goldsmith was a highly-respected citizen of the town who had a big personality. She lived a long life, 1882 to 1974, and I was fortunate enough to have met her several times during my teens and young adulthood. Her father had been the long-standing headmaster of Punchard High School, and Bessie gained her middle name from a contest her father presented to his students upon Bessie's birth, asking them to give Bessie a middle name. (David Dargie, who is the manager and warden of the Goldsmith reservation and lives in the bungalow on the reservation, told this story to me).

In addition to writing, Miss Goldsmith, who lived in what is now known as the Goldsmith House at 60 Elm St., taught home economics in the Andover Schools and was a part-time policewoman. For much of the first half of the 20th Century, she was one of the dominant figures in Andover and was involved in many of the town's significant organizations: the November Club, the Historical Society, the Andover Garden Club and AVIS. She also was on the Tercentennial Committee that, in 1946, gave Andover as good a celebration as it ever enjoyed and a wonderful book about Andover called, Andover, What It Was, What It Is.

Three stories beautifully sum up Miss Goldsmith's personality. In the book, Andover, A Century of Change, 1896-1996, author Eleanor Motley Richardson wrote that following a visit to a Boston garden show, Miss Goldsmith was asked her opinion of the show's quality. She tersely responded, "Too much mink, not enough manure."

A second story in Ms. Richardson's book describes Miss Goldsmith's sometimes unusual attire. According to Ms. Richardson, in the 1930s (a rather formal time) when Andover women appeared downtown in hats and white gloves, Goldsmith was known to be seen in knickers, big boots, and a tam-o'shanter.

Occasionally, Bessie even smoked a pipe.

The third story about Miss Goldsmith comes from Mr. Dargie, (mentioned above) who says a well-known yarn is that when Goldsmith resided in her father's bungalow she would observe people coming onto her 170 acres with buckets, intent on filling them with blueberries. After awhile, the berry pickers would attempt to leave the property on the path next to the bungalow. There, they would see the stern face of Miss Goldsmith, standing on her porch, rifle in hand, thanking them for collecting blueberries for her, and telling them to empty their buckets into a container next to the house.

Miss Goldsmith, as definitively as ever it will, or can, be historically detailed, described the origins of the "cocoanut" (as it was spelled in her time), Memorial Day tradition. Neither Sarah Loring Bailey's Historical Sketches of Andover (1880), nor Claude M. Fuess' 1959 book, Andover, Symbol of New England discuss the custom. Many of us, including Miss Goldsmith, grew up thinking that, in America, coconuts were to Decoration Day what turkey was to Thanksgiving; it just wasn't so. Miss Goldsmith tells the story of living out of Andover for the first time; it was 1900, and she was in a Boston school when she "wailed" that her Decoration Day had passed without a coconut. Her complaint was met with the "puzzled stares" of her school mates, who hadn't a clue what Bessie was talking about.

When Miss Goldsmith writes about the origins of Andover's unique tradition, she notes that by the 1880s children were buying coconuts in Andover for Decoration Day. She mentions that there were three possible candidates for the original tradition: Simeone's Variety Store in the Musgrove building, Basso's Store at 27 Main St., or Bacigalupo's Market at 42 Main St. However, she emphatically states that Bacigalupo's was the original outlet for coconuts on Memorial Day and was the store of her first coconut purchase. She believes that the only connection to the day dedicated to our "honored dead" and coconuts was that it was the only season during the year when coconuts were available in stores.

I'm sure that Miss Goldsmith's first purchase of a Decoration Day coconut was at Bacigalupo's (she was emphatic, using the word "No" with an exclamation point, that the earliest coconuts were not sold at Simeone's or Basso's). However, I must mention that, by 1909, 42 Main St. – the former site of Bacigalupo's, unless it had moved – had become The Metropolitan Bakery owned by my grandmother, Mary Dalton. I never heard it said by any member of my family that coconuts were sold at The Metropolitan. Therefore, the traditional outlet for Decoration Day coconuts must have passed to another store after Bacigalupo's. "Pete's" took over the tradition of selling the coconuts sometime after it opened in 1921, so there is a space of several years between Bacigalupo's and Pete's.

According to Ms. Richardson's book, Phidias Dantos, the son of one of one of the original owners of Pete's, says that the coconut tradition was at Basso's fruit store before it passed to his family's business. Aha! Then, on the basis that we will never get any better information, let it rest that the coconut/Memorial Day custom began at Bacigalupo's, passed to Basso's, and ended up at Pete's (the Andover Spa).

Miss Goldsmith's memory is that the holiday was always both somber and celebratory. The Indianapolis 500, the opposite of a solemn event, has been held on Memorial Day since 1911. In addition to being a day of remembrance, Memorial Day is the unofficial start of summer and a day for families to gather, especially since the holiday became part of a three day weekend.

Perhaps Miss Goldsmith best summed this duality of the holiday when she wrote in 1920: "The small boys will be scurrying everywhere, armed, we hope, with the traditional Decoration Day cocoanut.... A cocoanut smashed against a stone wall or even a stone in a churchyard and gnawed from the shell while listening to the band had a flavor of peculiar excellence as anyone who has tried it will testify.

"An indelible picture has been printed in my mind of a Memorial Day scene many years ago when a well-known Andover clergyman (the Rev. Frank R. Shipman, pastor of South Church, a man of outstanding dignity), that year the orator of the day, in the dignity of a frock coat and silk hat descended from a barouche [a carriage with a collapsible top] drawn up beside South Church. In one hand he bore a generous bouquet, in the other hand an American flag – and a cocoanut."

Yet, although that duality exists, we should remember that Memorial Day is primarily a day dedicated to the memories of those who have died for our country. I look forward to seeing the new memorial in the Park.
